Two people can care about each other and still fall out of tune. One wants to talk now; the other needs an hour. A comment meant lightly lands hard. A long day at work turns into a row about the dishes. This book is about the space between people, at home, in families, with friends or at work. It explains how pace and tone pull people apart, how stress changes what we hear, how communication really works, and why two people can see the same moment so differently. Then it turns to the hot minutes of anger, to repair and apologies that land, and to love in its many forms. Each chapter has everyday scenes, words you could use and one small thing to try. No blame and no verdicts: just a clearer view and a kinder next step.

Closer, Together

Staying in tune, talking it through and mending what goes wrong

For any two people who share a life: pace and tone, stress, how words land, anger and repair.
