SPREAD LOVE & ACCEPTANCE · BOOK 3

Understanding Each Other

How we hear, see and belong to each other, at home and in every group

by Christian

Christian's Lab
spreadloveandacceptance.com

Spread Love & Acceptance, Book 3: Understanding Each Other.
By Christian. Published by Christian's Lab, spreadloveandacceptance.com.

Text and pictures © 2026 Christian. First print edition, October 2026. Printed on demand.

ISBN: [to be added] (paperback)

Free online, always. Every chapter of the series is free to read at spreadloveandacceptance.com/book, in a short and a full version, with no account and no paid version. The print books are optional. You may copy pages of this book for personal use and for non-commercial teaching, with credit to "Spread Love & Acceptance, spreadloveandacceptance.com".

Not therapy. This book is general education about people and relationships. It is not a diagnosis, treatment or a replacement for help from a doctor, counsellor or other trained professional, and it can't know your situation.

If you are not safe. If you feel afraid of someone you live with, or someone controls your money, phone or movements, that is not a problem to fix with a worksheet. spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety lists free, private help. If you are in danger now, call your local emergency number.

The examples are made up. The people in this book's examples are made up; any likeness to real people is coincidence. None of them is a testimonial.

The research the chapters mention is listed in short at the back. The full list, with what each study found and links, is at spreadloveandacceptance.com/research.

Set in Lora, Fraunces and IBM Plex Mono.

Contents

About this book, and how to use it 4

Find it fast 5

Workpapers, tools and three friends 6

If you need help now 7

1 Why we get out of tune: communication at home 9

2 How communication works: meaning, listening, repair and messages 25

3 How we see each other: perception, bias, and the stories we tell 45

4 Attachment, trust and belonging 61

5 Closeness and love: being known, at every age 77

6 Fitting in: groups, influence and culture 95

7 Helping others well: support without fixing, boundaries, and not burning out 113

Words for hard moments 131

Questions people ask 132

Workpapers and tools in this book 134

Words used in this book 137

Research notes 139

Free on the website 146

The Logic Behind It: more examples 148

The series 149

Your notes 150

About this book, and how to use it

This book is about the people around you. It looks at how pace and tone pull people out of step, how words land, why two people remember the same moment differently, belonging and trust, love in its many forms, the pull of groups, and how to help someone without burning out.

It is for partners, families, friends, housemates and teams, and for anyone who has wondered why a kind conversation went wrong.

Read the chapters in any order. Each is a short version of a chapter that is free to read online, where the full version has more research, more examples and more to try. The code at the end of each chapter opens it on your phone.

HERE	ABOUT	FREE ONLINE AT SPREADLOVEANDACCEPTANCE.COM/BOOK
Chapter 1	Why we get out of tune	…/book/chapter-1
Chapter 2	How communication works	…/book/understanding-4-communication
Chapter 3	How we see each other	…/book/understanding-3-seeing
Chapter 4	Attachment, trust and belonging	…/book/understanding-5-belonging
Chapter 5	Closeness and love	…/book/understanding-15-love
Chapter 6	Groups, influence and culture	…/book/understanding-17-groups
Chapter 7	Helping others well	…/book/understanding-12-helping

There are four books in the series, and each stands on its own. The others are Book 1, Know Yourself Kindly, about yourself; Book 2, Heal and Steady, about the heavy days; Book 4, Share the Load, about sharing the work of a shared life. When a chapter mentions another book, it gives the book, the chapter and the page in that book, as in "Book 2, Chapter 1 (page 9)". The workbook, The Workpapers, has every form from the series on big pages.

FIVE BIG IDEAS

Five ideas run under the whole series.

- See the whole load. Count the unseen work too, the noticing, remembering and planning, yours and other people's.
- Fix the setup, not the person. When something keeps going wrong, change the arrangement around it before you blame anyone.
- Read your state first. How full your day already is changes how every word sounds, so check yourself before you react.
- Tune how you send and receive. People differ in pace, tone and wiring, and a mismatch is something to translate, never a fault.
- Notice the quiet incentives. Jobs nobody owns drift to whoever notices first, and a named owner and a real thank-you stop the drift.

Some chapters mention the six-week program, a free plan on the website with one small step a week (spreadloveandacceptance.com/prog-01). The workbook has a planner for it. The people in this book's examples are made up; any likeness to real people is coincidence.

Find it fast

Start with what is going on. Each line points to the chapter that helps most, and you can read that chapter on its own.

The same argument keeps coming back	Chapter 1 · Why we get out of tune	9
Your messages keep landing wrong	Chapter 2 · How communication works	25
You remember the same day very differently	Chapter 3 · How we see each other	45
Trust feels shaky, or you fear being left	Chapter 4 · Attachment, trust and belonging	61
Closeness has faded	Chapter 5 · Closeness and love	77
A group pulls you along	Chapter 6 · Groups, influence and culture	95
Someone you love is struggling	Chapter 7 · Helping others well	113
You are running on empty from caring	Chapter 7 · Helping others well	113

Workpapers, tools and three friends

WORKPAPER WP-09 A workpaper is a page you fill in, on your own or together, such as “Workpaper WP-09: Say it so it lands”. Every workpaper is free to print or to fill in on the website, and the book gives a code to scan for each one. The Workpapers: The Bound Edition has them all in one place, on big pages.

TOOL A tool is a helper you use on the website, such as “Tool: My weather today: the sky (the ladder)”. You use it and it gives you something back.

Workpapers and tools are kept in separate lists. Both are free and need no account, and what you type stays on your own device.

THREE FRIENDS WHO GIVE HINTS

Professor Puddles, a raindrop in a mortarboard, gives most of the hints, and answers questions on the website.

Tidbit, the quick, curious pup, points you at something to try.

Sugarfoot, the slower, steadier pup, turns up when a page needs a calmer pace.

They keep to the lighter pages. Where a chapter talks about crisis, deep grief or being hurt, the pages stay quiet and plain.

FROM THE PERSON WHO MADE THIS

> “I spent my career as a government auditor and audit manager in tax enforcement, internal controls and compliance.” “Everyone else seemed to have been handed a set of instructions about being human that nobody ever gave me, so I went looking for them myself.” “Everything here exists so that you can do the same thing in far less time than it took me.”

Christian, quoted from the About page at spreadloveandacceptance.com/about. Where the chapters say “I”, they speak for the website and these books; any fact about Christian in them comes from that page.

If you need help now

If you might act on thoughts of ending your life, or someone is in danger right now, call your local emergency number: 999 in the UK, 112 or 999 in Ireland, 911 in the US and Canada, 000 in Australia, 111 in New Zealand.

If you are struggling, or worried about someone else, you can talk to a trained person now. These lines are free, private and open day and night. You don't have to be sure it is a crisis to call or text.

WHERE YOU ARE	CALL OR TEXT
United States	Call or text 988 (the 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline), or chat at 988lifeline.org. You can also text HOME to 741741 (Crisis Text Line).
United Kingdom	Call Samaritans free on 116 123. Or text SHOUT to 85258 (Shout, a free text line).
Ireland	Call Samaritans free on 116 123.
Canada	Call or text 9-8-8 (the Suicide Crisis Helpline), in English or French.
Australia	Call Lifeline on 13 11 14, or text 0477 13 11 14.
New Zealand	Call or text 1737 (Need to talk?).
Anywhere else	findahelpline.com lists free helplines in many countries, by phone, text and chat.

For children and young people

UK	Childline, 0800 1111 (free, for anyone under 19)
Ireland	Childline, 1800 66 66 66 (free, for anyone up to 18)

Canada	Kids Help Phone, 1-800-668-6868, or text CONNECT to 686868
Australia	Kids Helpline, 1800 55 1800 (ages 5 to 25)
New Zealand	Youthline, 0800 376 633, or text 234
US	988 is for every age.

If you're worried about someone

Ask them plainly: "Are you thinking about ending your life?" Studies have found that asking does not put the idea in someone's head, and talking about it may even ease it. Listen, stay with them if you can, and call or text one of the lines above together. Chapter 7, page 113 says more about helping someone in a crisis, and Book 2, Chapter 3, page 49 about worry, low mood and when to get help.

This book is general education, not a crisis service. The website's tools keep what you type on your own device, so nobody there can see it or reply to it. The numbers were checked in October 2026. Numbers can change; findahelpline.com keeps an up-to-date list.

1

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 1

Why we get out of tune: communication at home

Why two kind, reasonable people can end up in a tangle neither of them started, and how to get back in step.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. The tangle often isn't about the words
2. Nearly in step is the noisy part
3. Three things knock you out of tune
4. Stress changes your station
5. Nobody has to be wrong
6. Get back in tune before you carry on
7. Go back in with a clear sentence
8. Small daily check-ins keep you in tune
9. Faith, culture and family voices
10. On your own: your side of the tuning
11. One example, followed through
12. Common mix-ups

IN SHORT

- A clash is often about how things were said. Pace, tone and urgency can be out of step even when both of you mean well.
- Nobody has to be wrong. Say that you are out of tune, pause with a time to come back, and slow down.
- Go back in with one clear sentence that says what happened, how you feel and what you would like.
- A 90-second daily check-in keeps small drifts small.

TUESDAY, 6:40PM

"I said I'd do it."

"I know, I'm just asking when."

Four sentences later nobody is talking about the bins any more. Somebody has mentioned last Christmas. Neither of you could point to the moment it turned.

The radio picture in this chapter is my own. The About page on the website describes how, for years, my closest relationships "filled up with static", with the same misunderstanding arriving again and again, and how what was missing was never care, on either side. It was timing, and a shared way of putting things. This chapter is the shared way.

01

The tangle often isn't about the words.

Two people can each say something perfectly reasonable and still clash, because the tone underneath doesn't match. Think of two radios slightly out of tune with each other. Together they make a crackle that neither of them was making alone.

One housemate asks, "Is anyone using the oven tonight?" The other says, "Why, did I leave a mess?" A plain question about a lasagne has been heard as a complaint about a baking tray. After your next small clash, ask yourself whether it was the words or the way they came out. It's usually the way.

YOU COULD SAY

"I think the words were fine. Something in how we said them got crossed."

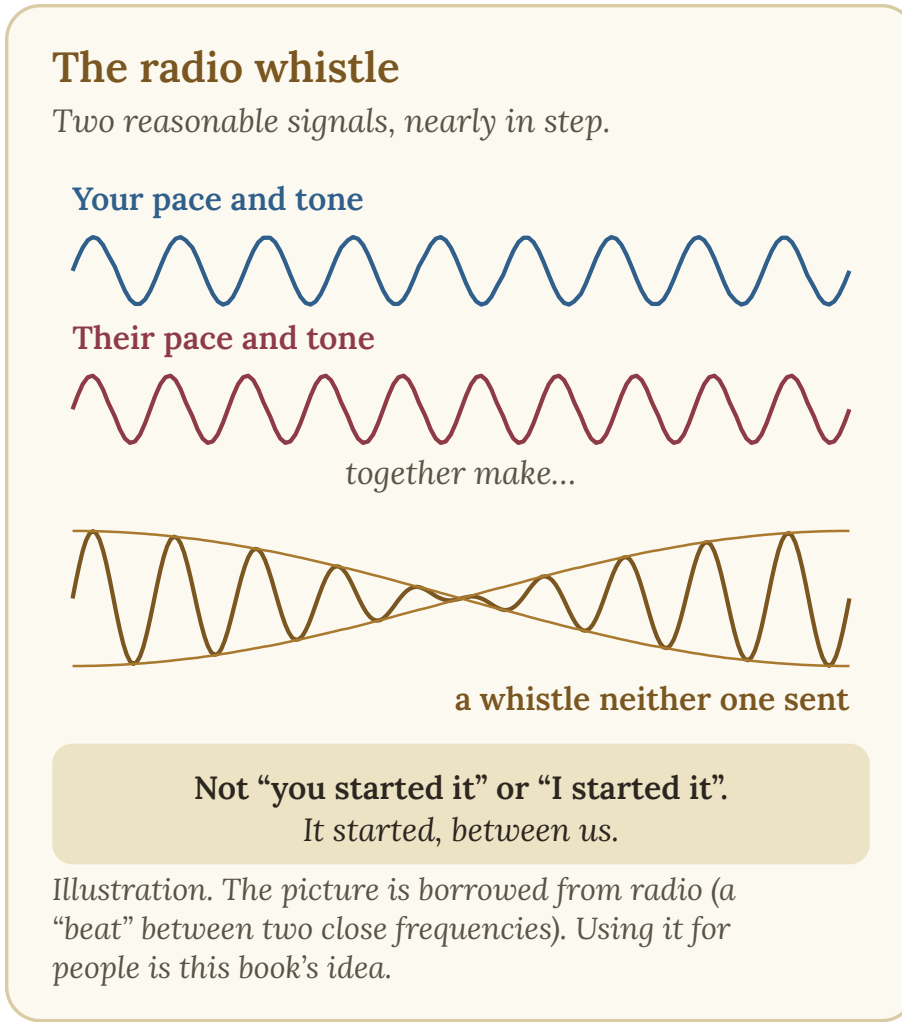

FIGURE 1 The radio whistle. Two reasonable signals, nearly in step, can make a clash that neither person started: it started between you.

02

Nearly in step is the noisy part.

Radios on very different stations don’t whistle at each other. The whistle comes when they are close but not quite matched, which is why people who know each other well can still clash. Research suggests we check our meaning less with people we’re close to, because we assume they already understand us.

Two sisters who talk on the phone every day argue about holiday plans far more often than either of them does with the cousins they see once a year at a christening or a funeral. The cousins get spelled out; the sisters get shorthand. With someone close to you, check one meaning today: “Just so I’ve got it right, you mean…?”

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> “I think I assumed you knew what I meant. Let me say it more clearly.”

03

Three things knock you out of tune.

How fast you’re talking is one. Tone is another, as when a simple update is heard as a complaint. The third is how urgent something feels, since “when you get a chance” can mean tonight to one person and some time next week to another. Texts lose most of their tone, which makes urgency especially easy to misread.

One of two business partners texts “Need to talk” between meetings. The other reads it as a crisis and lies awake until two in the morning running through every possible disaster, including the bank. It turns out to be about the printer. Add a time to your next request, so “at some point” becomes “by Friday”, and an update can say it’s an update.

> WAYS TO SAY IT
> “By when would be good?” “Is this an update, or a worry?”

04

Stress changes your station.

When you are tense, you may talk faster and be more likely to hear a pause as a snub. When you are tired and flat, your replies get slower and shorter. The Nervous System Ladder, a thirty-second self-check, gives you a best guess at which state you are in.

A dad gets home from a night shift at the depot and answers his teenage son in single words. “Fine.” “Yep.” “Later.” His son decides he doesn’t care. He’s simply running on empty, and he’d tell you so if he had the words left.

> WORDS TO TRY
> “I’m running low right now, and it isn’t about you. Can we talk after I’ve slept?”

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
My weather today: the sky (the ladder) spreadloveandacceptance.com/quick-checks

05

Nobody has to be wrong.

Two radios that both work perfectly will still crackle if they are slightly off, and arguing about whose fault the static is won’t clear it. Retuning will, which just means getting back in step.

A grandmother tells her grown-up son, at the door, that he looks tired. She means it as care. He hears “you’re not coping”. Both of them are right about what they meant and what they heard, which is exactly why arguing about it goes nowhere. In your next clash, try “we” instead of “you”: “We got crossed there.”

> YOU COULD SAY
> “I don’t think either of us meant it that way. Can we try that again?”

06

Get back in tune before you carry on.

Say out loud that you think you're out of sync, and check how tense you feel. Either of you can call a pause, and whoever pauses names a time to come back. Slow down, take shorter turns, and only then go back to the actual topic.

Two roommates in halls agree on a pause word on a calm Sunday, and they pick "static" because it makes them laugh. Three weeks later, in the middle of a row about someone's music at one in the morning, one of them says it. They stop. They come back at nine the next evening, as agreed, and sort it out in ten minutes. Agree a pause word with someone today, while you're both calm.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I need ten minutes. I'll come back at half past."

07

Go back in with a clear sentence.

When you return to the topic, say what happened, how you feel and what you'd like, in that order and in one go. "The bins go out early on Wednesday morning. I get anxious when they're late. Could you put them out tonight?" Or, from one co-parent to another: "The swim kit wasn't in the bag and I felt stressed at drop-off. Could you pack it on Sunday nights?" It's worth writing one of these about something small before you need it, so the shape is in your hand when you do.

Retuning, step by step

Before you carry on with a talk that has started to whistle.

1. Name the mismatch, without blame
   "I think we're on different wavelengths."
2. Check your own state
   Revved up or running on empty? Pause, and name a time to come back.
3. Slow the pace on purpose
   Shorter turns, more pauses, a lower voice.
4. Then go back to the topic
   It still matters. Now you can both hear it.

This book's four steps. Anyone can call a pause, and nobody should be blocked from leaving the room.

FIGURE 2 Retuning, step by step, before you carry on with a talk that has started to whistle.

PROFESSOR PUDDLES

When you go back in, one clear sentence beats a speech. This workpaper helps you shape it before you say it.

WORKPAPER WP-09 Say it so it lands · free to print · spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-09 · free to print
Say it so it lands
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

08

Small daily check-ins keep you in tune.

A short chat each day, like the 90-second daily check-in, makes tiny corrections before small things drift into a big argument. Habit research suggests small routines at a regular time are easier to keep than big ones done rarely. The quiet, easy stretches are the ones that drift most, so keep it going even when nothing seems wrong (see Complacency, spreadloveandacceptance.com/complacency).

A long-distance couple, one in Leeds and one in Toronto, send each other one 90-second voice note every morning. On the weeks they forget, they notice the difference by Thursday, usually as a slightly odd phone call about nothing much.

> WAYS TO SAY IT
> "Today I was carrying quite a lot. One thing I liked today was…"

Pick a time and a cue (straight after dinner works for a lot of people) and try it for three days.

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 1

The 90-second daily check-in

Priya and Dev, a couple on different shifts

The 90-second daily check-in Person A

Priya

Person B
Dev

Week beginning
5 October 2026

Each day

Day	Person	Stress tank	One thing I appreciated today	One small thing that didn't feel great	One thing that would help tomorrow
Mon	Priya	High	You left soup in the fridge before my night shift	Woke up to the washing still in the machine	A text when you're leaving work
Mon	Dev	Medium	Your note on the kettle		Bins out before I go at six
Tue	Priya	High	You kept the house quiet till noon		Ten minutes together at the shift change
Tue	Dev	Light	You booked the car in	Missed you at dinner again
Wed	Priya	Medium	Breakfast together at 8		Early night

Day	Person	Stress tank	One thing I appreciated today	One small thing that didn't feel great	One thing that would help tomorrow
Wed	Dev	Medium	You remembered my mum's call

STRESS TANK THIS WEEK

Priya
2 high, 1 medium, 0 light

Dev
0 high, 2 medium, 1 light

The weekly catch-up

Sore spot that keeps coming up	Times this week	Move to
Washing left in the machine	2	One owner per job
Missing each other at dinner	2	Keep watching

One sentence each, then just listen: no debating, no solving.

Fill in your own: The 90-second daily check-in

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-13 · free to print
The 90-second daily check-in
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-13

ONLINE
Complacency
spreadloveandacceptance.com/complacency

YOUR PART, AND ONLY YOUR PART. You control what you send, whether you check how it landed, and whether you step out to retune. You don't control how it's heard or how fast the other person settles. Matching energy here means matching care and effort, never volume: if someone gets louder, you don't have to follow. Stay at your level, and give the conversation the energy it gives back. More in Book 1, Chapter 2: who you are today (page 25)

SATURDAY, 10AM

One of you says the spare room needs clearing out at some point. She meant this month, and he heard today and has already cancelled his plans in his head. By lunchtime you are both upset about a room nobody has touched, and when you stop to ask what "at some point" meant, you find you are still not sure you agree.

Faith, culture and family voices

For many couples, faith is where they turn first, and a shared faith can be one of the strongest tools for staying in tune. Praying together, or a quiet moment after worship, can serve as a daily check-in. Some couples each pray on their own before they come back to a hard talk, with the pause still ending at a named time. A pastor, imam, rabbi, priest or trusted elder can be a good first person to talk to, and many can suggest a trained counsellor who shares your faith.

Emeka and Ngozi, married for twenty-six years, do their monthly look-back on a Sunday after church, over lunch. When a talk gets heated, either of them can say, “Let’s pray on it and come back at eight,” and they do.

Culture shapes how you talk too. In many families, respect for elders decides who can speak plainly to whom, and one habit helps a great deal, which is that each of you speaks to your own parents and relatives once you have agreed the message together.

> WORDS TO TRY
> “Can we pray about this and talk again tonight?” “Mum, we love you, and we’ve thought about it carefully. This year we’ll visit in August instead of at Easter.”

From two faiths or cultures? See Two faiths or cultures, one family.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Two faiths or cultures, one family
spreadloveandacceptance.com/two-faiths

On your own: your side of the tuning

Getting out of tune takes two, but retuning can start with one. You can learn your own pace and your own sense of urgency, so you notice when you are the one running fast or slow. Learn your early signs of drifting. A clipped reply is a common one, and so is a sudden need to win. Learn how you take words in best and say it once, as in “I hear things better in writing.” When you drift, step out, settle and come back, which you can do without anyone’s permission. Hamid lives alone and has noticed that his texts to friends come out short when he is tired, so now he waits until morning to answer anything that matters (more in On my own, spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own).

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
On my own
spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own

One example, followed through

Cerys, Marisol and Dougie share a house and a car, and two of them talk fast while the third, Dougie, talks slowly. At house meetings Dougie kept getting talked over, and for a while the other two read his silence as agreement. It came out in March, when he said he had never actually agreed to the new car rota. They tried a simple change, a round in which each person speaks once before anyone answers. It felt stilted at first, and Cerys kept wanting to jump in. By the third meeting Dougie was saying more, and the rota he suggested is the one they now use. They still have the occasional evening when the meeting turns into two fast talkers and one quiet one, and someone usually says “round” to reset it. Help by relationship has pages for many other kinds of shared life.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Help by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

Common mix-ups

Retuning isn't giving in. You still come back to the topic, at a time when you can hear each other. Being out of sync doesn't mean one of you is wrong, either; two fair points in two different tones will still clash. And a pause never means the topic is dropped. A pause always comes with a time to come back, or it isn't a pause.

To try it, agree on a shared phrase while things are calm, such as "I think we're out of tune", so that it works as a signal when you need it. For one week, each of you can note one moment you felt out of step, and at the end you can compare whether it was mostly pace, tone or urgency. Rewind the talk, Say it so it lands and the 90-second daily check-in are free on the site.

A limit to keep in mind: These tools only work when each person feels free to say no, to ask for a pause, or to keep their own notes private. If talking things through ever feels unsafe, or one of you feels you can't say no, stop using the tools and talk with a trained counsellor on your own. When someone is afraid of their partner, counselling together isn't advised. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) lists free, private hotlines.

A pause is for both of you. If one person is never allowed to pause, or a "pause" is used to punish with days of silence, that isn't retuning. Signs to look out for (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety#signs).

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Rewind the talk
spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

WORKPAPER WP-09 · free to print
Say it so it lands
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

WORKPAPER WP-13 · free to print
The 90-second daily check-in
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-13

ONLINE
Not safe at home? · Signs to look out for spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

THIS CONNECTS TO

Chapter 2 · How communication works — page 25
How meaning, tone and listening work

Book 2, Chapter 1 · Stress and the nervous system — Heal and Steady, page 9
Why stress speeds people up or shuts them down

Book 1, Chapter 2 · Your wiring, weather and words — Know Yourself Kindly, page 25
How you like to be spoken to

Book 1, Chapter 7 · Minds that work differently — Know Yourself Kindly, page 117
When pace and tone are a wiring difference

PUT IT TO USE

Six-week program, week 1 spreadloveandacceptance.com/prog-01

The 90-second daily check-in Workpaper · free to print
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-13

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/chapter-1-in-depth

2

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 2

How communication works: meaning, listening, repair and messages

Talking feels simple because we do it all day, yet every message has to travel from one mind to another, and a lot can change on the way. This chapter follows that journey and looks at what helps a message arrive the way you meant it.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. Meaning is made between two people
2. Every message says two things
3. Listening is something you do
4. Check, don't guess
5. Hard things land better when they start soft
6. Mix-ups are normal. Repair is the skill
7. Messages lose their tone on the way
8. Different styles aren't wrong styles
9. Small talk has a job, and it can be short
10. In everyday life
11. Common mix-ups
12. If you want to help someone else with this
13. When to get more help
14. Workpapers, tools and reading on this site
15. More for your situation

THURSDAY, 8:15AM

Ana texts her brother: "Can you call me when you're free?" She means there's no rush and she has a small question about the weekend. He reads it on the top deck of the 8.10 and spends the whole ride, eleven stops, wondering who is ill.

Small habits help a message arrive: listening, checking, starting softly, repairing quickly. A few ready-made lines make small talk easier for anyone who dreads it. And three tools elsewhere lean on this chapter. Say it so it lands (Book 4, Chapter 4, page 73) asks for what happened, how you feel and one clear request, because every message carries a second message about the relationship. The 90-second daily check-in (Chapter 1, page 9) keeps repairs small and frequent. And the Chat analyzer's whole-conversation view shows where a written conversation lost its tone.

01

Meaning is made between two people.

Words don't carry meaning on their own. The speaker has a meaning in mind, and the listener builds their own from the words, the tone, the timing and everything they already expect. Most of the time the two match well enough. Sometimes they don't, and neither person can see the gap from where they're standing.

A manager writes "Let's chat tomorrow" to a new starter, meaning a friendly catch-up and possibly a biscuit. He spends the evening convinced he's in trouble and rereads his last three emails looking for the mistake.

> YOU COULD SAY
> "I think what I meant and what you heard might be two different things. Can we check?"

02

Every message says two things.

There is what you say, and there is what it says about the two of you. "You're late" is a fact about time, and it can also mean "I was worried" or "I don't matter to you." People often argue about the fact when the hurt is in the second layer.

I take one eight-word sentence apart on the website's About page: "don't worry about it, I'll sort it out." Said kindly, in passing, it's reassurance. Said for the third time that month about the same job, it also says a job has no owner and a decision has been put off again. Both layers are in the sentence. Or take a housemate asking whether she used his pan. It's a question about a pan, and underneath it's a question about whether his things are respected here, which no amount of talk about the pan will settle. Next time a small thing stings, ask what it seemed to say about us.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I don't really mind about the pan. I think I wanted to know my stuff matters here."

03

Listening is something you do.

Hearing happens by itself. Listening is a choice, and most of us do it partly in order to reply, so we can fix or defend or advise or tell our own story. Real listening means following what the other person is trying to say and letting them know you got it before you add anything of your own.

A thirteen-year-old says school is pointless. Her dad starts explaining, at some length, why it isn't, and she stops talking and goes upstairs. The next time she says it, he bites his tongue and asks, "Pointless how? Tell me about today," and she talks for twenty minutes, mostly about a supply teacher and a seating plan.

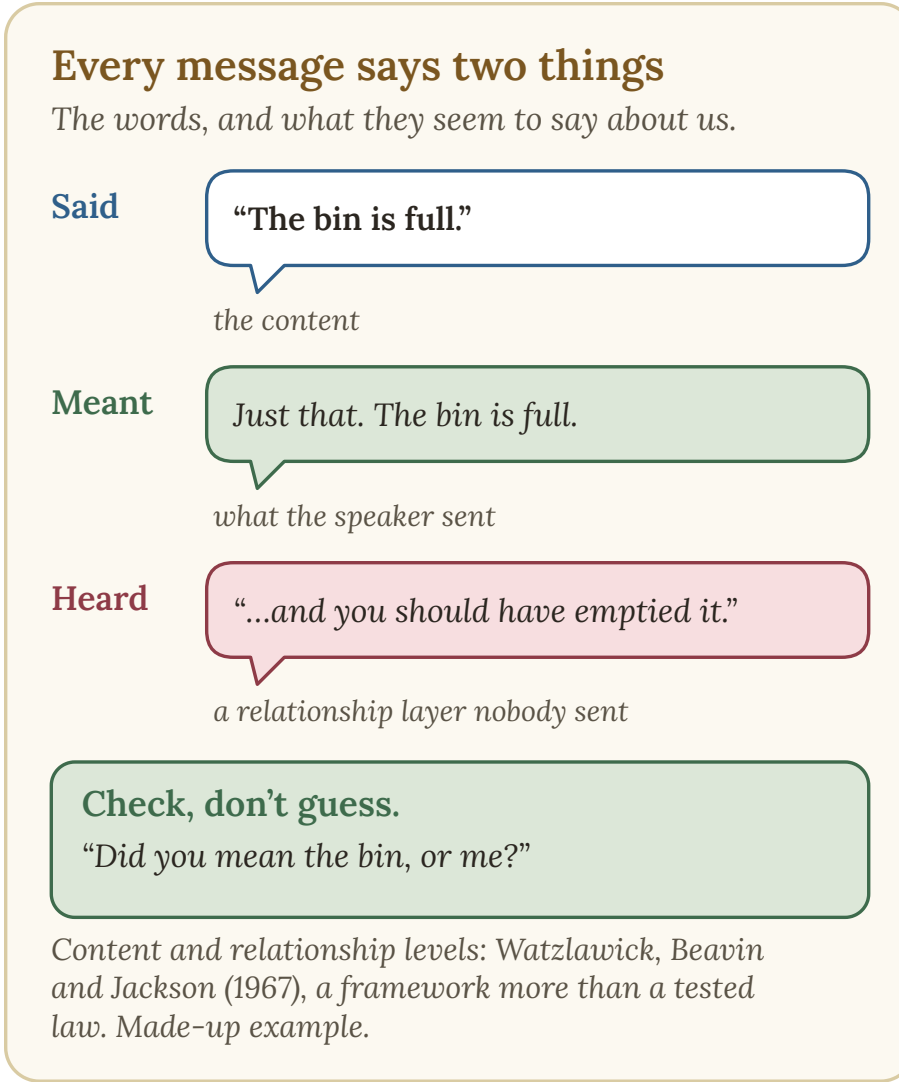

FIGURE 3 Every message says two things: the words, and what they seem to say about the two of you. Check, don't guess.

WAYS TO SAY IT

"So what I'm hearing is... Have I got that right?" "Do you want ideas, or do you want me to just listen?"

In one conversation today, wait until the other person has finished, then say back what you heard before you reply. It's harder than it sounds.

04

Check, don't guess.

Once we know something, it's hard to imagine not knowing it. So we leave out steps, assume the other person can tell what we mean, and guess what they meant instead of asking. We do it most with the people we know best. A short check costs a sentence. A wrong guess can cost a whole evening.

Two friends agree on "something low-key" for a birthday. One pictures a Chinese takeaway on the sofa in pyjamas. The other books a quiet table at the Italian place and irons a shirt. Both are disappointed, and both thought it was obvious.

> WORDS TO TRY
>
> "Just so I've got it right, you mean...?" "When you say soon, do you mean today or this week?"

PROFESSOR PUDDLES

Checking takes ten seconds and saves an evening. When you're ready to reply, this workpaper helps you say it so it lands.

WORKPAPER WP-09 Say it so it lands · free to print
· spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-09 · free to print
Say it so it lands
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

05

Hard things land better when they start soft.

How a hard talk begins often shapes how it ends. A complaint about one thing ("The bins weren't taken out") is easier to hear than a criticism of the person ("You never help"). A simple shape works for most hard things, which is to say what happened, how you feel and what you would like.

A woman wants her eighty-one-year-old father to stop driving at night. She has "You're not safe any more" on the tip of her tongue. She leaves it there and says, "You had two near-misses last month and I lie awake worrying. Could I drive us in the evenings?"

> YOU COULD SAY
> "What happened was... I felt... Could we...?"

06

Mix-ups are normal. Repair is the skill.

Even close, kind people misunderstand each other all the time. What keeps a relationship steady is noticing and fixing it, with something like "That came out wrong" or "Can we start again?" Small repairs, made often, build trust far faster than big apologies made rarely.

In the supermarket a stranger snaps "Excuse me!" when your trolley blocks the tins, and you snap back. A second later you add, "Sorry, long day," and she smiles and says hers has been too, and you end up talking about the price of coffee.

Say it so it lands

A simple shape for most hard things.

What happened
One specific fact, not a verdict.
"The bins didn't go out on Tuesday."

How I feel
Your feeling, in a word or two.
"I felt let down, because I'd asked."

What I'd like
A small, doable ask.
"Could you set a reminder for next week?"

✕ Not: "You never help."
That's about the person, so it starts a defence.

This book's plain-language shape, a cousin of I-messages and Nonviolent Communication; research on such scripts is mixed, and tone matters most.

FIGURE 4 Say it so it lands: what happened, how I feel, what I'd like. A complaint about an action can be heard; a criticism of the person starts a defence.

WORDS YOU COULD USE

"Can I try that again?" "I think I took that the wrong way. What did you mean?"

07

Messages lose their tone on the way.

A text or email carries the words without your face or your voice, so the reader fills in the tone with however they feel right now, and a tired reader hears a tired, cross message. Short replies, missing greetings and late-night timing all get read as meaning something.

In the group chat for the school summer fair, one parent replies "Fine." to the plan for the tombola. Two others decide she's annoyed. She was typing one-handed while stirring a pan of soup.

> WAYS TO SAY IT
> "Quick reply. I'm not cross!" "This isn't urgent. Any time this week is fine."

Before you send your next tricky message, read it out loud in the grumpiest voice you can manage. If it sounds harsh, add a warm word. (This is my favourite test in the whole book, and it takes four seconds.)

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 2

Chat analyzer: a whole conversation

Dana and Raj, coworkers on the same project

Chat analyzer: paste a conversation

01 Paste the conversation

Dana: Did the slides go to the client?
Raj: Not yet, still waiting on the numbers from finance
Dana: I needed them by 10. This always happens.
Raj: I can't make finance go faster.
Dana: Forget it. I'll do it myself.

02 Which one is you?

Dana (3 messages) Raj (2 messages)

03 THE READ

What happened
Ends shut down. 5 messages: 3 from you, 2 from Raj. The words don't make it clear what it's mostly about, so the Reader won't guess. It starts calm. There's no one big turn, but some tension creeps in. By the end someone has pulled back. That isn't the same as calm: it can mean they're overwhelmed, or hurt.

Your part · always / never
I said "This always happens", and that isn't fair: it isn't every time. What I meant was: [one recent time, and how it felt].

04 Check your reply before you send it

Your reply
Sorry, that last line wasn't fair. When the numbers weren't in by 10, I felt worried about the client. Could you ask finance for them by 9 next time? I'll chase them with you.

THE CHECK

✓ Says what you need or how it landed · ✓ Makes one clear ask · ✓ No verdicts, always/never, dismissals, sarcasm, jabs, comparisons or shutting the door · ✓ Stays on one topic

Nothing in the wording is likely to add heat. Read it once more as if you were them, then send it when you're calm.

The Reader looks at one side's part without blaming anyone.

Fill in your own: Chat analyzer

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Chat analyzer
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

08

Different styles aren't wrong styles.

Some people say exactly what they mean. Others hint, and expect you to read between the lines. Some talk fast and overlap; others need a pause to think. Families and cultures and different kinds of minds all shape this, and a clash between two styles is usually a matter of translation rather than of anyone being difficult.

Asked whether the report is ready, an autistic employee says, "No, I need two more days." Her manager hears bluntness until they talk about it, after which he starts to find her clarity a relief.

> WORDS TO TRY
> "I'm quite direct, so if I sound blunt, it doesn't mean I'm cross."
> "It helps me if you say exactly what you need."

09

Small talk has a job, and it can be short.

Small talk ("Cold today, isn't it?" "Busy weekend?") isn't really about the weather. Its job is to say that you see the other person and that the two of you are okay. In 1923 the anthropologist Bronisław Malinowski called this "phatic communion", talk whose main purpose is bonding more than information. Small moments like this matter more than people expect. Sandstrom and Dunn (2014) found that people who had a short, friendly exchange with a coffee-shop barista felt more belonging and a better mood than people who kept it purely efficient.

Small talk is hard work for many people, though, including many autistic people, shy or anxious people and people speaking a second language. The rules are unwritten, and it uses energy that some people would rather keep. A few ready-made lines, sometimes called social scripts, take the guesswork out, and keeping it short is allowed.

A dad who dreads the school gate keeps three lines ready: "Morning! How's your week going?", then "Oh, nice," and finally "Right, I'd better get going. See you Friday." Some mornings he still sits in the car with the radio on until the bell goes. Most days he gets through it, and one of the other dads now saves him a space by the railings.

YOU COULD SAY

"Morning! How's your week been?" "How do you know Nico?" "Oh, how was that?" "Lovely to see you. I'd better get on." And to opt out kindly, "I'm not great at chit-chat, but it's really nice to see you."

TRY THIS.

Write your own three lines, one to open, one follow-up question and one to close, and use them once this week. If you would rather skip ahead to a real topic, "Can I ask you about something I'm actually curious about?" works too.

THURSDAY, 9:02AM

Ana's brother rings the moment he's off the bus. "Who's ill?" She laughs and says nobody, she only wanted to know whether he's free on Saturday to help move a wardrobe. He laughs too, a little shakily. The following week her text reads, "No rush and nothing's wrong. Quick question about Saturday, call when you're free."

ANOTHER WAY TO SEE IT

Hinting instead of asking

FROM OUTSIDE "It's a bit cold in here," and then annoyance when nobody closes the window.

THE LOGIC A direct request can sound like an order → A hint offers the idea without pressure → The other person can take it up as if it were their own idea, or let it pass → Nobody has to give an open no

IT'S LIKE Leaving a door open for someone, rather than pushing them through it.

WHY IT FITS Indirect speech lets people ask while both sides keep face.

THE OTHER SIDE Hints get missed, and then both people feel blamed.

YOU COULD SAY "When I hint, I'm trying to be gentle."

ONE SMALL STEP Add the ask to the hint. "It's cold. Could you close the window?"

More situations like this one, each in the same six parts, are free online.
spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it?item=hints

In everyday life

On your own: how you talk to yourself

You also send yourself messages all day, from "Typical, I always mess this up" to "That was hard, and I handled it." The same ideas apply, so notice the tone, check whether the message is fair and repair it when it is harsh. Catch one harsh sentence you say to yourself today and rewrite it the way you would speak to someone you like.

With other people

Between partners, "We never go out any more" sounds like a complaint about evenings, and underneath it may mean "I miss you," so answering that layer goes further than defending the calendar. "Stop that!" tells a child what not to do without saying what to do instead, while "Feet on the floor, please" is easier to follow. In meetings, silence is often taken as agreement until a quieter colleague says later that she never agreed, and a round of "Anyone see it differently?" catches this early. "Are you eating properly?" is care in one generation's language and checking up in another's.

- Feedback at work. Talk about the work rather than the person, with one recent example of what good looks like. Then ask, "What's been getting in the way?" When you're the one receiving it, "Thanks. Can I think about it and come back tomorrow?" is a fine first answer. The full chapter walks through a whole performance conversation.

Common mix-ups

"If they loved me, they'd just know" is the big one. Closeness makes us check less without making us understand any more, so saying it clearly is a kindness, and no test of love. Listening isn't agreeing, either. You can understand someone completely and still see it differently, and the understanding comes first. A repair doesn't mean you're admitting to being the bad one; it just says it didn't go the way you wanted, and either person can make one. And texts feel safer for hard things because they're easier to send. They're also much easier to misread, so for anything tender, add warmth, or talk.

If you want to help someone else with this

Maybe a friend keeps having the same argument with their partner, or your teenager feels nobody listens. You can't communicate for them, but you can help.

- Listen first. The most useful thing is often to be the person who really hears them, without fixing.
- Help them separate the two layers, by asking what it was about and what it seemed to say about the two of them.
- Offer the simple shape of what happened, how they feel and what they would like, and let them find their own words.
- Stay out of judging the other person's character. You only hear one side, and they may make up next week.
- Notice if it's more than a mix-up. If they seem afraid of the other person, gently share Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety)

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
>
> "Do you want me to just listen, or help you think about what to say?"

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

When to get more help

Most mix-ups can be eased with the ideas here. Some situations need more.

- When talking makes things worse every time, a couples or family counsellor can slow conversations down and help both people be heard.
- When you're afraid of how someone will react, that isn't a communication problem. Clearer words are not the fix, and you don't have to keep trying. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) lists free, private help, and signs to look out for (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety#signs) may help you name what's happening.
- When someone is always "misunderstanding" you in ways that make you doubt your memory or your sense of what happened, talk with someone you trust outside the relationship.
- When speaking or understanding is hard for you every day, because of anxiety, a hearing or language difference, or how your mind works, a doctor, speech and language therapist or counsellor may help. Needing support is not a failing.
- If you're overwhelmed right now, start with Upset right now.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Cool-down corner:
Upset right now?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/upset-right-now

Workpapers, tools and reading on the website

Try one of these this week with one real conversation. Say it so it lands helps you shape a hard sentence, Rewind the talk walks you back through a talk that went wrong, and the wiring card puts how you communicate on one page.

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-09 · free to print
Say it so it lands
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-09

TOOL
Rewind the talk
spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

TOOL
How you connect: how I like to be spoken to spreadloveandacceptance.com/wiring-card

Tools helpers you use on the website

- Chat analyzer: calm replies after a fight.
- Communication style quiz: a playful look at your own style.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Chat analyzer
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

ONLINE
Communication style quiz
spreadloveandacceptance.com/communication-style-quiz

More for your situation

- At work: messages and meetings
- Friends
- For teens and for parents

- Co-parenting
- Sharing a room
- Long distance
- Two faiths or cultures, one family
- Neurodivergent relationships: communication
- Find it by relationship

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
At work: messages and meetings
spreadloveandacceptance.com/work

ONLINE
Friends
spreadloveandacceptance.com/friends

ONLINE
For teens
spreadloveandacceptance.com/teens

ONLINE
for parents
spreadloveandacceptance.com/parents

TOOL
Plan it once: handoff bag for two homes
spreadloveandacceptance.com/co-parenting

TOOL
Plan it once: room agreement for roommates spreadloveandacceptance.com/sharing-a-room

ONLINE
Long distance
spreadloveandacceptance.com/long-distance

ONLINE
Two faiths or cultures, one family
spreadloveandacceptance.com/two-faiths

ONLINE
Neurodivergent relationships: communication
spreadloveandacceptance.com/neurodivergent-relationships

ONLINE
Find it by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

WHAT TO REMEMBER

- ✓ Meaning is made between two people. What you say and what they hear can differ without either of you being wrong.
- ✓ Every message says two things, the words themselves and what they seem to say about the two of you.
- ✓ A short question saves a long misunderstanding, so check before you guess.
- ✓ Mix-ups are normal, and repairing them is the skill. Small talk is allowed to be short.

THIS CONNECTS TO

Chapter 1 · Why we get out of tune page 9
Pace, tone and getting back in tune

Book 4, Chapter 4 · Two kinds of fair Share the Load, page 73
Letting a comment land

Book 2, Chapter 5 · Healing after hurt Heal and Steady, page 85
Repair after it goes wrong

Book 1, Chapter 2 · Your wiring, weather and words Know Yourself Kindly, page 25
How you like to be spoken to

PUT IT TO USE

Chat analyzer
Calm replies after a fight
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

Communication style quiz
A playful look at your own style
spreadloveandacceptance.com/communication-style-quiz

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-4-communication-in-depth

3

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 3

How we see each other: perception, bias, and the stories we tell

Why two people can watch the same moment and come away with two different stories, and how to see others, and yourself, a little more fairly.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. Seeing is a best guess
2. You see what you're looking for
3. We fill the gaps with stories
4. We judge ourselves by our reasons, and others by their actions
5. Quick shortcuts can lead us astray
6. Everyone feels like the one who sees clearly
7. "Us" and "them" changes what we see
8. Ask, don't guess
9. In everyday life
10. Common mix-ups
11. If you want to help someone else with this
12. When to get more help
13. Tools and reading on this site
14. More for your situation

IN SHORT

- Seeing is a best guess. Your brain fills in a lot of what you think you see and hear.
- We fill gaps with stories, and the story often feels like a fact.
- We judge ourselves by our reasons and others by their actions, and that gap causes a lot of hurt.

- Asking is kinder and more accurate than trying to read someone's mind.

WEDNESDAY, 12:15PM

You wave at a colleague across the canteen, tray in one hand. She looks straight through you and walks off. All afternoon you wonder what you did, running back through Monday's meeting, until at four o'clock she messages to say sorry for not stopping; she'd just had a call about her dad. She never saw you wave.

How feelings work (Book 1, Chapter 4, page 63) and Stress and the nervous system (Book 2, Chapter 1, page 9) look inward. This chapter looks outward, at how we see other people, why misunderstandings are so common even between kind and clever people, and what helps. Before I built any of this I spent my career as a government auditor, walking into situations where nobody could tell me straight what had happened. Almost everyone, it turned out, was doing their best with the piece of the picture they could actually see. That's more or less this chapter.

Some of the tools elsewhere depend on it. Who did what (Book 4, Chapter 1, page 9) exists because everyone sees their own effort more clearly than other people's, so two honest guesses of "I do about 60%" can add up to well over 100%, and one shared page settles it. Rewind the talk (Book 4, Chapter 3, page 51) slows down the habit of judging ourselves by our reasons and others by their actions. And the Chat analyzer follows this chapter's last idea, that asking beats guessing.

01

Seeing is a best guess.

Your eyes and ears take in far less than you think, and your brain fills in the rest from what it expects. Most of the time this works well, and fast. It also means that what you see is partly what you expected to see, so two people can watch the same moment and honestly see different things.

Two parents watch their son in an under-12s match on a freezing Sunday morning. One sees him giving up. The other sees him being careful with the ankle he went over on last week. Same boy, same touchline, same flask of tea. Next time you're sure what someone meant by a look, think of two other things it could have meant.

> THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF
> "This is what I see, and there may be more to it." "What else could this be?"

02

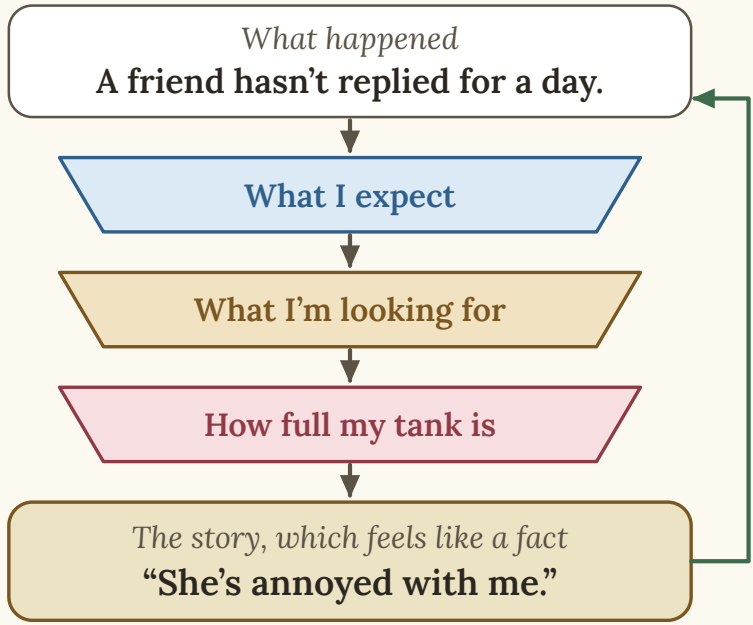

You see what you're looking for.

Attention is like a torch in a dark room. You see what it lights up and can miss what it doesn't, even when it is right in front of you. If you are looking for proof that someone doesn't care, you will notice every missed call and none of the little kindnesses.

A woman decides in her first week that her new manager doesn't like her. For a month she notices every short email he sends (there are a lot; he writes short emails to everyone). She somehow misses the fact that he gave her the best project on the team. If there's someone you're struggling with, write down one kind thing they do each day for a week. It's an odd exercise, and it tends to change what the torch finds.

Seeing is a best guess

What happened passes through filters before it becomes "what I saw".

Ask, don't guess.
"Is everything okay?"
Her phone broke.

Illustration. The brain fills gaps from what it expects ("predictive processing", an influential idea, still debated).

FIGURE 5 Seeing is a best guess. The story that comes out feels like a fact; asking is kinder and more accurate than reading minds.

THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF

"What might I be missing?" "If I were looking for the opposite, what would I see?"

03

We fill the gaps with stories.

When we don't know why someone did something, the mind makes up a reason fast. A late reply becomes anger and a closed door becomes rejection, and the story arrives feeling like a fact. Memory works this way too, because each time we remember something we rebuild it a little, so two people can honestly remember the same evening differently.

A friend doesn't reply for two days, and by the Sunday evening you've decided she's fed up with you and drafted, then deleted, a message saying so. She was camping in Snowdonia with no signal, and comes back with photos of a sheep.

> YOU COULD SAY
>
> "The story I'm telling myself is that you're upset with me. Is that right?"

When something someone did hurts, write down the story you're telling yourself, then one other story that would also fit.

04

We judge ourselves by our reasons, and others by their actions.

When you are late, you know why, whether it was the traffic, a phone call or a child who lost a shoe. When someone else is late, you only see the lateness, and it is easy to decide they are careless. We all tend to blame other people's character for things that are really about their situation.

A driver cuts in front of you on the ring road and you call him an idiot, not quite under your breath. The next week, rushing to the hospital because your mum has had a fall, you cut someone up yourself, and you know exactly why, and you'd like them to know it too.

THOUGHTS YOU COULD TRY

"What might be going on for them that I can't see?" "If I did this, what would my reason be?"

PROFESSOR PUDDLES

We know our own reasons and only see other people's actions. Writing out their side, in their words, is a fair way to even that up.

TOOL Rewind the talk · spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Rewind the talk
spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

05

Quick shortcuts can lead us astray.

The brain uses shortcuts to save time, and many are useful. Some lead to unfair judgements, such as a first impression that colours everything after it, a bad moment that outweighs ten good ones, or a quick guess about someone from their age, accent, looks or group. Everyone has these shortcuts, and the trouble starts when nobody notices them.

A housemate decides on day one that the new tenant is messy, because of one box left in the hall. Every bit of mess after that counts as proof. Her own mug collection on the landing goes unseen. Pick one person you've made your mind up about and look for one thing that doesn't fit.

> THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF
> "Am I looking for proof of what I already think?" "Would I judge this the same if someone I like did it?"

06

Everyone feels like the one who sees clearly.

Most of us feel that we see things as they really are and that anyone who disagrees must be missing something, or not thinking straight. The other person feels exactly the same about you, and each of you can see the other's lens more easily than your own.

Two adult siblings argue about how their parents raised them, and each insists they are just being realistic, which is true of what each of them lived through.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I think we're both seeing this from where we stand. Can you tell me how it looks from yours?"

In your next disagreement, explain the other person's view back to them until they agree you've got it, and only then give yours. You'll find it slows everything down, which is rather the point.

07

"Us" and "them" changes what we see.

People split into groups quickly, even over tiny things. We tend to see our own group as varied and full of individuals and other groups as all the same, and we give our own side the benefit of the doubt. Spending real time with people from the other group, as equals, is one of the best ways to soften this.

At one depot the night shift calls the day shift lazy and the day shift calls the night shift sloppy, and has done for as long as anyone can remember. After a joint training day with a bad buffet and a fire drill, people start using each other's names. It doesn't fix everything. It does stop the notes on the kettle.

THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF

"Would I say this about one of 'us'?" "Who in that group do I actually know?"

ONE SMALL STEP.

Have one real conversation this month with someone from a group you tend to see as "other", and ask about their day before you ask about their views.

08

Ask, don't guess.

Imagining yourself in someone's shoes is a kind start, though research suggests it doesn't make us much more accurate about what they think, while asking does. A simple, curious question like "What was that like for you?" works better than the cleverest guess.

A grandmother thinks her teenage grandson hates visiting, because he's always on his phone at her kitchen table. One Sunday she asks. He's been messaging a friend who is having a hard time, and he likes being at her house because it's calm, and because of her apple crumble, though he wouldn't have said so if she hadn't asked.

WAYS TO SAY IT

"Can I check what you meant?" "What was going on for you?" "I might have this wrong. How did it look from your side?"

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 3

Chat analyzer

Zoe, texting her oldest friend, who moved abroad

Chat analyzer

Mode

I'm about to send this | Someone sent me this Type your sentence

You always cancel on me last minute. Can we pick a time for a call on Sunday?

Relationship

Friends

Channel

Text / chat

THE READ

How it may land for most listeners

Some words may hurt. How it may sound: sharp in places.

What stands out

The word "always" (words like "always" and "never" leave no room for the times it went fine).

A clearer way to say it

Lately it's felt like you cancel on me last minute. Can we pick a time for a call on Sunday?

What changed, and why always → lately it's felt like. "Always" and "never" erase every exception, so the listener argues the exception.

The ask stayed; only the word that would start an argument changed.

Fill in your own: Chat analyzer

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Chat analyzer
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

THURSDAY, 12:20PM

You see your colleague in the canteen again, and this time you go over and ask how her dad is. She tells you about the hospital, and the waiting, and the car park charges, and you end up sharing a table until the end of the break.

ANOTHER WAY TO SEE IT

Blunt, direct feedback

FROM OUTSIDE "The second half doesn't work." No softening at all.

THE LOGIC The aim is to help the work be right → Soft words can hide the point → A clear point is quicker to fix → Being direct saves the other person's time

IT'S LIKE A sat nav says "Turn left". It never says "You might consider left."

WHY IT FITS Mix-ups between differently wired people run both ways. The plain speaker isn't the only one missing signals.

THE OTHER SIDE Words land on feelings too, and the listener may feel attacked.

YOU COULD SAY "I'm direct because I trust you with the real answer."

ONE SMALL STEP Start with one warm line, then give the fact.

More situations like this one, each in the same six parts, are free online.
spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it?item=blunt

In everyday life

We tell stories about ourselves too, and "I always mess things up" is usually built from a few bright memories that leave a great deal out. After years together, partners tend to stop checking and start assuming. And "I know what you meant" can do a lot of quiet damage in a long relationship. Children are often labelled early as the difficult one or the easy one, and the label becomes a lens that only sees what fits. With ADHD, attention is pulled by whatever is new or urgent and can lock on hard, so someone may truly not have seen or heard. It helps to get their attention first and to put requests in writing. More in the full chapter.

Common mix-ups

Nobody just sees things as they are. Everyone sees through a lens, and knowing that is where fairness starts. Memory isn't a recording either; it's rebuilt each time, so two honest people can remember the same evening differently and both be telling the truth. Giving someone the benefit of the doubt doesn't mean ignoring what happened. It means checking the story before you decide, and if something hurtful keeps happening, that matters. And a face or a tone is a clue to what someone meant. Faces and tones vary a lot between people and between cultures, so a face is a weaker clue than it feels.

If you want to help someone else with this

Start with how they feel. Make sense of the feeling first, and only then ask whether there might be another way to see it. Offer information rather than verdicts: "I know she had a hard week" helps more than "You're being unfair to her." Check your own guesses out loud ("I assumed he was annoyed. I'll ask"), which shows how it's done. Be careful with labels for children and colleagues, because they stick and then shape what everyone sees. And believe people about their own experience. Seeing other angles never means telling someone that what happened to them didn't happen.

> WORDS TO TRY
> "That sounds really hurtful. Do you know what was going on for them?" "It might be worth asking. Want to plan what to say?"

When to get more help

Seeing other people's side is a strength. It should never mean doubting yourself when you know something is wrong. If someone often tells you that what you saw, heard or remember didn't happen, that you're "too sensitive" or "imagining it," and you find yourself unsure of your own mind, take that seriously. It can be part of controlling behaviour. Signs to look out for (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) and Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) can help, privately.

It may also help to talk to a counsellor or other trained professional if you notice you often feel others are against you, find it hard to trust anyone, or keep getting stuck in the same painful stories about yourself. Those patterns are common and understandable, and they often change with support.

This chapter is general education, not diagnosis or therapy.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Signs to look out for · Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

Tools and reading on the website

Tools helpers you use on the website

- Rewind the talk: see their side: a free perspective-taking tool.
- Chat analyzer: how a sentence might land before you say it.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Rewind the talk
spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

TOOL
Chat analyzer
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

More for your situation

- Book 1, Chapter 1: where your lens came from (page 9)
- Book 4, Chapter 3: full tanks and different angles (page 51)
- Family rifts, Co-parenting and For grown-up children
- Communication between different minds
- For teens and For parents
- Everything on the site · Help by relationship

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Family rifts
spreadloveandacceptance.com/family-rifts

TOOL
Plan it once: handoff bag for two homes
spreadloveandacceptance.com/co-parenting

ONLINE
For grown-up children spreadloveandacceptance.com/grown-up-children

ONLINE
Communication between different minds
spreadloveandacceptance.com/neurodivergent-relationships

ONLINE
For teens
spreadloveandacceptance.com/teens

ONLINE
For parents
spreadloveandacceptance.com/parents

ONLINE
Everything on the site spreadloveandacceptance.com/contents

ONLINE
Help by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

THIS CONNECTS TO

Book 1, Chapter 1 · Where your lens came from Where your lens came from
Know Yourself Kindly, page 9

Book 4, Chapter 1 · The work nobody sees
Why the other person doesn't see the work
Share the Load, page 9

Book 4, Chapter 3 · Full tanks and different angles
Seven angles on the same moment
Share the Load, page 51

Chapter 6 · Groups, influence and culture
Us and them, and the stories groups tell page 95

PUT IT TO USE

Rewind the talk: see their side
A free perspective-taking tool
spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder

Chat analyzer
How a sentence might land before you say it
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-3-seeing-in-depth

4

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 4

Attachment, trust and belonging

Why we need each other, how the bonds we had early on shape what we expect today, and how trust and belonging are built and lost and built again, one small moment at a time.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. Belonging is a basic need
2. Early bonds teach us what to expect
3. Patterns, not boxes
4. Trust is built in small moments
5. Feeling safe with someone calms the body
6. Fitting in isn't the same as belonging
7. When trust breaks, rebuilding takes time
8. You can start building connection from wherever you are
9. If you're a teenager
10. In everyday life
11. Common mix-ups
12. If you want to help someone else with this
13. When to get more help
14. Reading on this site
15. More for your situation

SUNDAY, 9:30PM

Kai sent a long message to a friend at lunchtime, four paragraphs about his new job and a question at the end. It says "Read 12:47". No reply. By teatime he has gone from thinking she's busy to thinking she's annoyed, and by half nine he's wondering whether anybody really likes him at all. The friend, meanwhile, is at her nephew's sixth birthday party at a soft-play centre, with her phone in her coat pocket under a pile of other coats.

Two tools elsewhere rest on this chapter. One owner per job (Book 4, Chapter 2, page 27) works because trust is built from small promises kept, and a named owner turns "someone will probably do it" into a promise people can rely on. The monthly look-back (Book 4, Chapter 5, page 95) looks at the month and keeps both people out of the dock, because feeling safe is what lets anyone say what went wrong.

01

Belonging is a basic need.

People need to feel connected, the way we need food and sleep. When we feel left out, it can hurt in a way that feels almost physical (Naomi Eisenberger and colleagues, 2003). That hurt works like hunger, telling us to reach for connection.

Rhea moves to Manchester for work. She's busy and doing well, and by the third month she feels flat and teary every Sunday afternoon, when the office is shut and nobody in the city knows her well enough to ring. This week, reach out to one person, even if it's only a short "thinking of you".

> THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF
>
> "Feeling lonely says I need connection, like anyone does."

02

Early bonds teach us what to expect.

As children, we learn from the people who cared for us whether others will come when we need them. If help usually came, we tend to expect it. If it came sometimes, or rarely, we may learn to cling harder or to stop asking. These lessons are a starting point that later relationships can change. This is the idea of attachment, first described by John Bowlby (1969) and studied by Mary Ainsworth and colleagues (1978).

Watch a toddler at the park. He runs off towards the ducks, runs back to check his grandmother is still on the bench, runs off again a bit further, comes back, goes further still. He's braver each time because he knows exactly where she is.

> YOU COULD SAY
>
> (to a child) "I'm right here. Go and look, and come back whenever you want."

Think of one person who was a safe base for you, at any age, and what they actually did.

03

Patterns, not boxes.

As adults, some of us worry a lot about being left, and reach out more when we feel unsure. Some of us pull back when things get close, and need more space. Many of us feel mostly secure, and most of us mix all three.

These are patterns that can soften and change, especially in steady, kind relationships. Cindy Hazan and Phillip Shaver (1987) first described them in adults, and later work, such as R. Chris Fraley and colleagues (2015), suggests they work as sliding scales.

When things feel tense, Ronan wants to talk it through straight away. His wife Clara needs to go quiet first, usually in the garden. He reads her quiet as a sign she's leaving; she reads his questions through the back door as pressure. Once they see the pattern, they agree that Clara will say "I need an hour, and I'm coming back," and Ronan will wait, which he finds very hard for about the first month.

WORDS YOU COULD USE

"I'm not going anywhere. I just need some quiet. Let's talk at eight."

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 4

Our pause plan

Imani and Kwame, married ten years

Our pause plan

Fill this in together on a calm day, or fill it in yourself and send it to your partner to change.

Our pause word or sentence
"Pause. I'll be back at …", with a hand on the heart

Shortest break, so our bodies can settle 30 minutes

Whoever pauses names a clock time to come back, no later than the same evening

If one of us can't come back on time
Send one text with a new time. No silence.

The first sentence when we come back
"I'm back. You first: what do you most want me to hear?"

YOUR PLAN, READY TO SEND

Our pause plan

Pause word: “Pause. I’ll be back at …”, with a hand on the heart

Shortest break: 30 minutes

Return time: whoever pauses names a clock time, no later than the same evening

If one of us can’t come back on time: Send one text with a new time. No silence.

When we come back, we start with: “I’m back. You first: what do you most want me to hear?”

For relationships where everyone feels safe.

Fill in your own: Our pause plan

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE

Our pause plan

spreadloveandacceptance.com/pursue-withdraw

04

Trust is built in small moments.

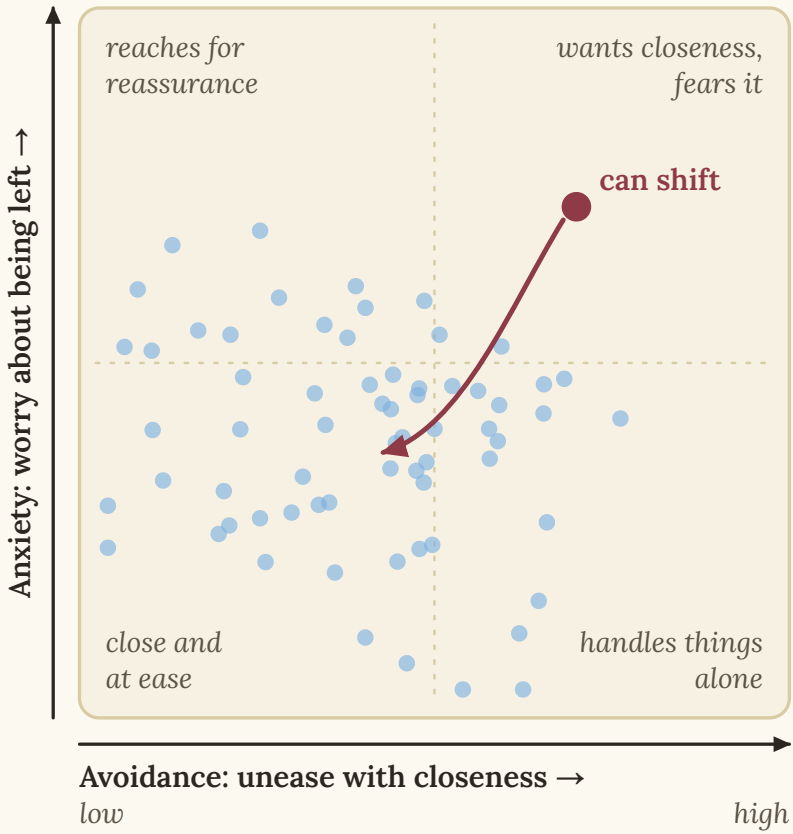

Trust rarely comes from big gestures. It grows from small, ordinary things done again and again, like doing what you said, and being the same person on a hard day as on a good one. Honestly, it’s a bit boring. That’s why it works.

A new team member says she will send the figures by Thursday, and she does. The next week she warns early that something will be late. By the third month her manager trusts her completely, and he would struggle to name a single moment when it happened.

Patterns, not boxes

Two scales. Everyone sits somewhere, and can move.

After Brennan, Clark and Shaver (1998) and Fraley and colleagues (2015): adult attachment is best measured as two scales, not types. Dots are illustrative, not data.

FIGURE 6 Attachment as two scales, not four boxes: worry about being left, and unease with closeness. Everyone sits somewhere, and can move. Dots are illustrative.

WAYS TO SAY IT

"I said I'd do it by Friday. I'm running late, so here's where it's at."

05

Feeling safe with someone calms the body.

Being with someone we trust can settle our nervous system. In one study, holding a trusted partner's hand calmed the brain's response to threat (James Coan and colleagues, 2006). A calm voice, a hand to hold, or just someone nearby can make a hard moment easier to bear. It works both ways, so we can be that safe presence for others too, often without saying much.

After a panic attack, Kieran's friend doesn't try to fix anything. He sits next to him on the step outside the flats and says, "Take your time. I'm here," and they stay there until Kieran's breathing slows.

WORDS TO TRY

"You don't have to talk. I'll just sit with you." "Would company help right now, or quiet?"

Notice who helps you feel calmer, and tell them. "I always feel better after seeing you" is a lovely thing to hear and almost nobody says it.

06

Fitting in isn't the same as belonging.

Fitting in means changing yourself to be accepted. Belonging means being accepted as you are. Teams, families, clubs and communities can offer either. Being left out of a group hurts even when the group doesn't matter much to us, and real belonging grows where people feel safe to be themselves and to speak up.

At a new job, Ola laughs at jokes she doesn't find funny and orders a lime and soda "for the drive" so nobody asks why she doesn't drink, and she goes home exhausted every Friday. At her book club, in the back room of the library on alternate Tuesdays, she says what she really thinks of the book, and people ask her to say more.

> YOU COULD SAY
> (in a group) "I see it a bit differently. Is it okay if I say why?" "Has everyone had a chance to say something?"

07

When trust breaks, rebuilding takes time.

When someone lets us down badly, trust doesn't come back with one apology. It returns slowly, as words are matched by actions over time. The person who broke trust can own what happened and be patient. The person who was hurt can decide, at their own pace, whether and how much to trust again.

Two adult sisters fall out after one tells a private story at a family dinner, for a laugh. The apology is a start, and what slowly rebuilds trust is the months afterwards, when the story never comes up again and the sister checks before sharing anything.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I know sorry isn't enough. I'll show you, and you can take whatever time you need."

08

You can start building connection from wherever you are.

If you feel alone right now, big friendships can feel a long way off. Belonging can start much smaller than that: a chat with a neighbour, a regular class, an online group about something you love. Even small, light contact with people we barely know can lift our mood (Gillian Sandstrom and Elizabeth Dunn, 2014).

After his divorce, Martin starts saying more than "thanks" to the man at the coffee stall outside the station. A few weeks later they're talking football every morning, mostly about Stoke's defence. It's a small friendship. It makes Mondays easier.

WAYS TO SAY IT

"I'm new around here. Is there anything you'd recommend?" "I loved what you said in the group. Would you like to get a coffee sometime?"

MONDAY, 8:10AM

Kai's phone buzzes with an apology. Her phone was in her coat all day at her nephew's party, she loved the message, and is he free for coffee on Thursday? Kai thinks about how far last night's story ran, and decides that next time a reply is slow he will send a light "No rush, just thinking of you" and leave it there.

If you're a teenager

Ezra is sixteen when he sees a photo of his three closest friends at the cinema and finds out there is a group chat he isn't in. It hurts like a punch, because being left out really does register a bit like pain. He drafts something sharp and deletes it, then messages one friend instead, saying he's a bit gutted not to be asked and asking whether he did something. It turns out they thought he would be at football. One of the friendships really is drifting, though, and that is allowed to hurt too.

WORDS TO TRY

"Bit gutted not to be asked. Did something happen?" "I'd like to come next time, even if I can't always make it." "I miss how we used to be. Are we okay?"

ANOTHER WAY TO SEE IT

Going quiet in an argument

FROM OUTSIDE Mid-row, one person stops answering and stares at the floor.

THE LOGIC A fast argument floods the body → A flooded brain struggles to find good words → Silence stops the bad words getting out → Going quiet is a way of braking

IT'S LIKE Pulling over in heavy rain until you can see the road.

WHY IT FITS Arguments that turn more negative than positive go with more trouble later, and a pause can stop that slide.

THE OTHER SIDE For someone who needs to settle things, silence can feel like being left.

YOU COULD SAY "I'm going quiet so I don't say something I don't mean."

ONE SMALL STEP Always name a time to come back, and then come back at that time.

More situations like this one, each in the same six parts, are free online.
spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it?item=quiet-in-fight

In everyday life

When one partner texts a lot while apart and the other forgets, agreeing on one goodnight message can keep both feeling connected. A child who acts up at pick-up may simply be letting go of a long day with the safest person they know. A friend who always cancels may be overwhelmed, and "Is it easier if we do something short?" keeps the door open. At work, a team where mistakes can be admitted without blame builds trust faster than one where everyone hides them, and in a shared house, one simple weekly meal can turn people who share a kitchen into people who look out for each other.

On your own: belonging with yourself

Belonging also includes how you treat yourself. If you are kind to yourself on a bad day, you carry a small safe base wherever you go, and people who learn to comfort themselves often find it easier to let others in, because they are less afraid of being let down. You are allowed to need people, and a lonely day is hard without being a forecast. On my own has more for people living alone.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
On my own
spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own

Common mix-ups

- "Needing people means I'm needy." Everyone needs connection, including the people who hide it well.
- "My attachment style is fixed for life." Patterns can change, especially through steady, kind relationships and reflection.
- "Jealousy and checking up show how much they love me." Reaching for reassurance is human, and so is asking for something out of care for the relationship. Controlling who someone sees, or checking their phone without agreement, is not love and is not an attachment style. See signs to look out for (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety).
- "If I forgive, I have to trust again straight away." Forgiving and trusting are different. Trust can return slowly, or not at all, and that's your call.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
signs to look out for spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

If you want to help someone else with this

Be steady. Turn up when you said you would, which matters more than any big gesture. If someone says they feel alone, listen before you remind them how many friends they have. Invite, and keep inviting; people who feel left out may say no a few times, and a warm invitation with no pressure still counts each time. In groups, notice who is on the edge and ask their view. And leave the labels out. Telling someone they're "so avoidant" or "so clingy" has never helped anyone, as far as I can tell, while "what would help?" often does.

> YOU COULD SAY
>
> "I'm here, and I'm not going anywhere." "We're having a few people over on Friday. No pressure, but I'd love you to come."

When to get more help

- If loneliness has lasted a long time, or comes with low mood, hopelessness or thoughts of not wanting to be here, please talk to a doctor or a mental health service. If you are in danger right now, call your local emergency number or see Upset right now.
- If fear of being left, or of getting close, keeps hurting your relationships, a counsellor or therapist can help you understand where it comes from and how to change it.
- If someone uses your need for them against you, by cutting you off from friends, checking where you are, or threatening to leave to get their way, that is not about attachment. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) lists free, private help.
- If trust was broken in a way that frightened you, you don't owe anyone a second chance. Your safety comes first.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Cool-down corner: Upset right now?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/upset-right-now

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

Reading on the website

Pick one small way to turn towards someone this week. Turning towards, When one talks and one goes quiet and How to apologise so it counts have more ideas.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Turning towards spreadloveandacceptance.com/turning-toward

TOOL
Cool-down corner: make a pause plan spreadloveandacceptance.com/pursue-withdraw

ONLINE
How to apologise so it counts spreadloveandacceptance.com/apology-languages

More for your situation

- On my own after a breakup
- Friends
- Parents and foster, adoptive and kinship families
- Long distance
- Family rifts
- Coming out as an adult
- At work
- Grief and later life
- Find it by relationship

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
On my own after a breakup
spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own

ONLINE
Friends
spreadloveandacceptance.com/friends

ONLINE
Parents
spreadloveandacceptance.com/parents

ONLINE
foster, adoptive and kinship families spreadloveandacceptance.com/foster-and-kinship

ONLINE
Long distance
spreadloveandacceptance.com/long-distance

ONLINE
Family rifts
spreadloveandacceptance.com/family-rifts

ONLINE
Coming out as an adult spreadloveandacceptance.com/coming-out

TOOL
Team job list: the 10-minute weekly round
spreadloveandacceptance.com/work

ONLINE
Grief and later life
spreadloveandacceptance.com/grief

ONLINE
Find it by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

WHAT TO REMEMBER

- ✓ Belonging is a basic need. Feeling lonely or left out is a signal, like hunger.
- ✓ Early bonds set expectations that can change. What we learned about being cared for can soften over time.
- ✓ Trust grows in small moments. Doing what you said, again and again, matters more than big gestures.
- ✓ You can start small, with one friendly exchange or one kept promise.

THIS CONNECTS TO

Book 1, Chapter 1 · Where your lens came from Early trust and the rules from home
Know Yourself Kindly, page 9

Chapter 5 · Closeness and love
Being known, at every age
page 77

Chapter 6 · Groups, influence and culture
Belonging to groups, and their pull
page 95

Book 2, Chapter 4 · Loss, grief and big life changes
When a bond is lost
Heal and Steady, page 69

PUT IT TO USE

Bonding: how closeness grows
What research says about closeness, with small ideas for partners, kids, friends, family, coworkers and you spreadloveandacceptance.com/bonding

Friends
When a friendship drifts, and how to reach out
spreadloveandacceptance.com/friends

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-5-belonging-in-depth

5

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 5

Closeness and love: being known, at every age

How closeness grows, what it means to feel truly known, how love changes over the years, and how it looks in every kind of relationship, at every age, including for people on their own.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. Love comes in many forms
2. Closeness grows from being known
3. Closeness is built a step at a time
4. Feeling understood matters most
5. Old maps show up in love
6. Love changes over time
7. Love at every age
8. Love is something you do
9. If you're a teenager
10. In everyday life
11. Common mix-ups
12. If you want to help someone else with this
13. When to get more help
14. Reading on this site
15. More for your situation

FRIDAY, 10:30PM

You and Charlie have shared a home for eleven years. Tonight you're both on the sofa and both on your phones, a cooking programme on in the background that neither of you is watching, and you realise you can't remember the last time the two of you talked about anything except bills, the boiler and whose turn it is to cook. You love Charlie. You feel oddly alone in the same room.

This chapter is about closeness in all its forms, far beyond romance. It looks at what helps people feel near to each other, and why closeness fades and how it grows back, and it builds on Chapter 4 (page 61), on attachment and trust.

01

Love comes in many forms.

The ancient Greeks had several words for love, for friends, for family, for romantic partners and for strangers. People love in many ways today too. There are lifelong friendships, partners of any gender, people with more than one partner, chosen family, people who are asexual or aromantic and build deep closeness without romance or sex, and people on their own who pour love into friends, family, pets, work and community. A life can be full of love without a partner in it.

A woman in her fifties who has never wanted a partner describes her best friend of thirty years as her great love story. They have been through two house moves, one cancer scare, a disastrous caravan holiday in Tenby and more Sunday phone calls than either of them could count. Try writing down three or more people you love, of any kind, and next to each one the way you show it. The list is usually longer than people expect.

02

Closeness grows from being known.

Intimacy is about much more than touch or romance, and at its heart is being known. The psychologists Reis and Shaver described it as a back-and-forth, in which one person shares something real about themselves and the other responds in a way that leaves them feeling understood and cared for. In a diary study by Laurenceau, Barrett and Pietromonaco (1998), feeling that the other person really responded was a big part of what made everyday conversations feel intimate.

Two brothers who mostly talk about football are driving to their dad's care home when one admits that he finds the visits really hard. The other says he does too, and that he always feels guilty on the way home. It's the longest conversation they've had in years, and it lasts all the way to the car park, where they sit with the engine off for another ten minutes. Sharing one small, true thing with someone you care about (a worry, a hope, something that made you happy this week) and noticing how they respond is the same thing on a smaller scale.

03

Closeness is built a step at a time.

People usually get close by sharing a little more, and then a little more, when it feels safe. In a well-known study by Aron and colleagues (1997), pairs of strangers who took turns asking gradually more personal questions, now known as the "36 questions", felt closer after forty-five minutes than pairs who made small talk. The same idea works in friendships and long relationships, where closeness grows when both people take small, matched steps. Two new neighbours start with the weather and the parking, which in their street is a serious subject. A few months later one asks how the other's mum is getting on. Some time after that, over the fence, one of them says, "Can I tell you what's really been going on?"

Next time you talk to someone you would like to know better, ask one question a little deeper than usual, such as what has been on their mind lately, and if they answer, share something of your own back.

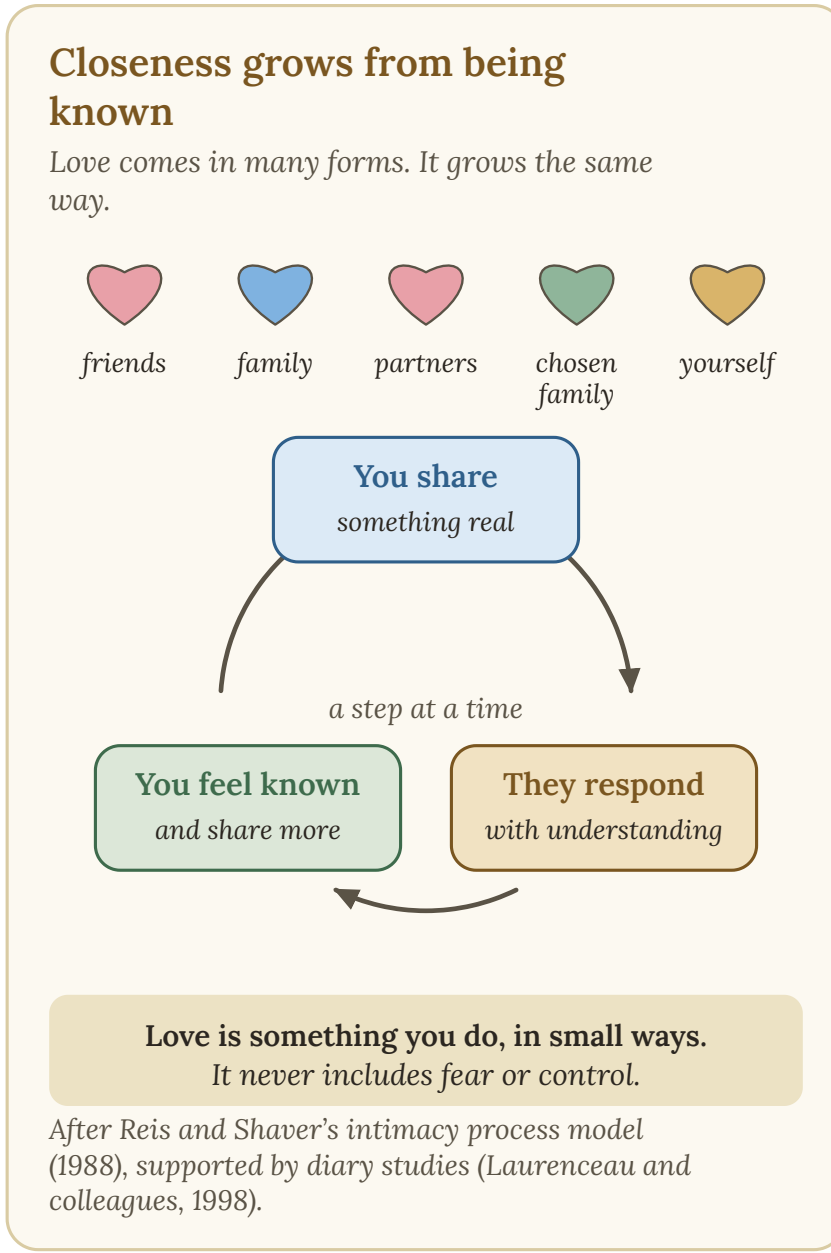

FIGURE 7 Closeness grows from being known: you share something real, the other person responds with understanding, and you share a little more.

04

Feeling understood matters most.

What makes someone feel loved is often less about grand gestures and more about feeling understood. Researchers call this responsiveness, meaning noticing, understanding and caring about what matters to the other person, and it shows in small moments such as how you react to good news. Gable and colleagues (2004) found that people whose partners usually met their good news with real interest and warmth felt closer and more satisfied together. When a teenager announces that she's been picked for the school band, her grandad puts the paper down, smiles, and asks which instrument and when the first concert is. She talks for twenty minutes, mostly about the trombone section. The next time someone shares good news with you, put your phone face down and ask two follow-up questions. That's the whole method.

05

Old maps show up in love.

The patterns from Chapter 4 (page 61) often come out most strongly with the people we love most. Hazan and Shaver (1987) suggested that adult love uses the same attachment system as childhood bonds. When closeness feels shaky, some people reach harder for reassurance and others pull back to feel safe, and both are ways of protecting something precious. When his partner goes quiet, Leo texts five times in an hour, while his partner, who goes quiet in order to calm down, feels crowded. They agree that his partner will say, "I need an hour, and I'll message you at eight," and Leo finds, somewhat to his surprise, that he can wait for a known time. What he couldn't bear was the not knowing. It's worth noticing what you do when closeness feels shaky, and telling someone you trust what helps you feel safe again.

06

Love changes over time.

Early love is often intense, with racing thoughts and a lot of longing, and over the years it usually settles into something calmer and deeper. A review by Acevedo and Aron (2009) found that some people in long relationships still report strong romantic love, without the anxious, obsessive edge of early love, and that this was linked to being happier together.

In experiments by Aron and colleagues (2000), couples who tried a new, mildly challenging activity together felt better about their relationship afterwards than couples given a dull task. After twenty-five years, one couple sign up for a pottery class at the community centre. They're both terrible at it. They laugh all evening and bring home a bowl that won't stand up, and on the way home one of them says it felt like a date. I'd take new over big: a new walk, a new recipe, a new café in the next town.

SUGARFOOT

Little rituals, like a Sunday walk or a goodnight text, keep love warm through the years. Look after the ones you already have.

WORKPAPER WP-15 Keep your little rituals alive · free to print
· spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-15

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-15 · free to print
Keep your little rituals alive
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-15

07

Love at every age.

Love looks different across a life. Teenagers' first loves can be huge and real, and adults juggle love with work and children and, often, ageing parents. Many older people choose to spend their time with fewer, closer people, which Carstensen and colleagues (1999) linked to feeling that time is more limited, so that the most meaningful relationships matter more. People find new love at seventy and eighty, and people lose great loves and carry them always. A widower of seventy-eight meets a woman at his walking group, and when his children are surprised he tells them, "I loved your mother for fifty years. I still do. And I'm allowed to be happy now."

If it feels right, ask someone from another generation about love in their life. Older relatives usually have stories nobody has asked for.

08

Love is something you do.

Feelings of love come and go, while the actions of love can be steady. They include turning towards someone when they speak, keeping small promises, saying thank you and sorry, and making room for who they are. Physical closeness, like a hug or holding hands, matters a lot to some people and less to others, and sex is part of closeness in some relationships and not in others. What matters is that both people feel comfortable and free to say yes or no. Love never includes fear, threats or control.

A woman notices that her friend has gone quiet since his divorce. She has never once said she loves him. Every Thursday she texts the single word "Walk?" and turns up at his door at six, in her old wax jacket, whatever the weather. Ask someone you love what small thing makes them feel cared for, and do it this week.

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 5

Our time-together deal

Jamal and Tess, a couple; Jamal games most evenings

Our time-together deal

Your name
Jamal

Their name
Tess

Game nights (or long phone time)
Tuesday and Friday evenings, plus Sunday afternoon

Heads-up rule
Say before a session over an hour, and roughly when it ends.

When one of us asks for time
Finish this match, then I'm yours. No new one.

Our protected evening
Wednesday, from 7: we cook together

Phone-free times
Dinner, and the first 20 minutes in bed

Chores before the session
Dishes and our own jobs for the day are done first.

YOUR DEAL, READY TO SEND

Our time-together deal (Jamal and Tess), with each line above. A link holds the deal as it is right now: if either of you changes something, send a new link.

Fill in your own: Our time-together deal

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Our time-together deal
spreadloveandacceptance.com/gaming-and-time-together

YOUR PART, AND ONLY YOUR PART. You can share a little of yourself, listen well, turn towards the people you love and keep small promises. You can't make someone love you, or love you in the way you want. If closeness keeps hurting you, or you feel afraid, that is not a failure of love on your part. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety)

THE NEXT FRIDAY, 10:30PM

This time you leave both phones on the kitchen counter, make two cups of tea and ask Charlie what they've been thinking about lately that they haven't told you. Charlie is quiet for a moment and then talks about their dad getting older, and how they dread the phone ringing late at night. You listen, and then you talk about the restructure at work. The tea goes cold, and it is midnight before either of you looks at the clock.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

If you're a teenager

First love can be huge and real, and so can a first breakup. Ines is sixteen when she is dumped by message on a Tuesday night, and she cries until two in the morning. Being told by adults that she will get over it doesn't help. Telling her cousin, who simply listens, does, along with muting the chat instead of rereading it and a rule of no checking his profile after ten. A few weeks later she notices that a whole day has gone by without her thinking about him.

> YOU COULD SAY
> "I don't need advice, I just need to tell someone." "Can we reply when we can, rather than all day?" And if you are the one ending it, "I don't want to go out any more. I'm sorry. It isn't about something you did wrong."

ANOTHER WAY TO SEE IT

Showing love by doing more than saying

FROM OUTSIDE One partner rarely says "I love you", but fixes the bike and makes the lunches.

THE LOGIC Love can be said or done → For some people, doing feels truer than saying → Fixing the bike is the message → The words are in the action

IT'S LIKE Two languages for the same sentence.

WHY IT FITS People show care in different ways, and practical help can be the clearest way some people have.

THE OTHER SIDE A partner who hears love in words may feel unloved, even surrounded by kind acts.

YOU COULD SAY "Fixing your bike was me saying I love you."

ONE SMALL STEP One word and one deed each. Say it on the way out, and notice the deeds out loud.

More situations like this one, each in the same six parts, are free online.
spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it?item=love-in-deeds

In everyday life

On your own

Being single, widowed, divorced or happily alone doesn't mean a life without love, because friendships, family, community and the way you treat yourself are all places where love lives. If you want a partner and don't have one, that longing is real and worth being gentle with (see On my own, spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own). Most partners drift into talking only about jobs and bills, and one real question a week can bring them back. Friendship needs tending like any other love, and families often love each other deeply and say it rarely, so a short "I'm glad you're my sister" can mean a great deal.

- Different levels of desire. This is very common in long relationships and is nobody's fault. Talk at a calm time, keep some affection that doesn't have to lead anywhere, and remember that a kind "no" is a no to the moment and never a rejection of the person. A qualified sex therapist or couples therapist can help. More in the full chapter.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
On my own
spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own

Common mix-ups

The spark fading doesn't mean love is over; early intensity usually settles, and many long relationships stay warm and close and lively for decades. Nobody reads minds, either, however much they love you, so saying what helps is a gift and not a failure of romance.

- "Jealousy proves love." Feeling jealous is human, and asking for something out of care for the relationship is not control. Checking up without agreement, cutting someone off or punishing them is not love. See signs to look out for (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety#signs).

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
signs to look out for spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

If you want to help someone else with this

Respect their kind of love, without assuming that everyone wants a partner or children. Be a safe person to tell things to, which means listening without judging and keeping what they share private. After a loss or a breakup, keep showing up, because many people get plenty of support for two weeks and very little after that.

- If you're worried about someone's relationship, stay close and kind rather than criticising their partner. If they seem afraid, gently share Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety)

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I'm always glad to hear from you." "You don't have to explain your relationship to me. I just want you to be happy and safe."

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

When to get more help

- If you feel very lonely or low most days for two weeks or more, talk to a doctor or counsellor.
- If closeness feels frightening, or you keep ending up in relationships that hurt you, a counsellor or therapist can help you understand why.
- Couples or family counselling can help when you feel stuck, or keep having the same fight.
- If someone you love controls you, frightens you, checks your phone, cuts you off from friends or pressures you into anything you don't want, that isn't love. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) lists free, private help.
- If you're in danger now, call your local emergency number. Upset right now? can help you take the first step.

This chapter is general education, not therapy.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Cool-down corner:
Upset right now?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/upset-right-now

Reading on the website

More for your situation

- Attachment, trust and belonging (Chapter 4, page 61)

- Friends · More than two · Long distance
- Coming out as an adult
- On my own · Grief and later life
- Retired together · Empty nest
- Help by relationship: find the pages for your situation.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Friends
spreadloveandacceptance.com/friends

ONLINE
More than two spreadloveandacceptance.com/more-than-two

ONLINE
Long distance
spreadloveandacceptance.com/long-distance

ONLINE
Coming out as an adult spreadloveandacceptance.com/coming-out

ONLINE
On my own
spreadloveandacceptance.com/on-my-own

ONLINE
Grief and later life
spreadloveandacceptance.com/grief

ONLINE
Retired together spreadloveandacceptance.com/retired-together

ONLINE
Empty nest
spreadloveandacceptance.com/empty-nest

ONLINE
Help by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

WHAT TO REMEMBER

- ✓ Love comes in many forms.
- ✓ Closeness is built a step at a time.
- ✓ Old maps show up in love.
- ✓ Love changes over time.
- ✓ Love is something you do.

THIS CONNECTS TO

Chapter 4 · Attachment, trust and belonging page 61
Attachment and trust

Chapter 1 · Why we get out of tune page 9
Staying in tune day to day

Book 4, Chapter 1 · The work nobody sees Share the Load, page 9
Noticing the work love does

Book 1, Chapter 3 · Who you are becoming Know Yourself Kindly, page 47
Growing as a person inside a relationship

PUT IT TO USE

Bonding: how closeness grows
What research says about closeness, with small ideas for partners, kids, friends, family and you spreadloveandacceptance.com/bonding

Turning towards
On small daily moments of connection spreadloveandacceptance.com/turning-toward

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-15-love-in-depth

6

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 6

Fitting in: groups, influence and culture

Why fitting in pulls so hard, how groups shape what we say and do, how culture and family set the unwritten rules, and how to stay yourself, and disagree kindly, without losing your place, whether the group is a family, a friendship, a team, a faith, a neighbourhood or a group chat.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. The pull to fit in is old and strong
2. We go along more than we think
3. Authority can lead people a long way
4. "Us and them" forms fast
5. Norms are the rules nobody wrote down
6. Cultures differ, and so do people inside them
7. Every family is a small culture
8. Online groups pull harder and faster
9. You can belong and still be yourself
10. Disagree kindly, and early
11. If you're a teenager
12. In everyday life
13. If you want to help someone else with this
14. When to get more help
15. Reading on this site
16. More for your situation

THURSDAY, 9:20PM

The family group chat is buzzing. Someone has posted a joke about your cousin's new partner, and the laughing faces are piling up underneath it. You don't find it funny, and you also don't want to be the one who can't take a joke. Everyone else seems fine with it, and your thumb is already hovering over the laughing face.

We all belong to groups, and we need them. Chapter 4 (page 61) looks at belonging, at why we need each other and how trust grows. This chapter looks at the other side, at how groups pull on us, why we go along and how to stay true to yourself while staying connected.

01

The pull to fit in is old and strong.

For most of human history, being part of a group meant survival, and being left out still feels alarming. In studies by Williams and colleagues (2000), people who were simply left out of an online ball-throwing game, by strangers they would never meet, felt worse and less as if they belonged. So we bend to stay in, by laughing at jokes, keeping quiet and going along. A new starter at a warehouse gets called "Prof" because he wears glasses and once used the word "ostensibly". He hates it. He laughs anyway, every time, because more than anything that first month he wants to be one of the team.

This week, notice one moment when you went along with something to fit in. Wanting to fit in is normal. You still get to choose what you go along with.

02

We go along more than we think.

In Solomon Asch's famous experiments (Asch, 1956), people judged which of three lines matched another line. When the actors around them all gave the same wrong answer, people went along with the group on about a third of the answers, even though the right answer was obvious.

Many people never went along at all. Later research, such as a review by Bond and Smith (1996), found the effect is real but varies, smaller in more recent studies and larger in cultures that put the group first. In a meeting where everyone praises a new rota, one woman sees a big problem with the Friday cover and stays quiet. Afterwards, by the lifts, two colleagues tell her they had doubts too. Writing down your own view before a group decision, and only then listening to the group, makes it easier to say what you actually think.

03

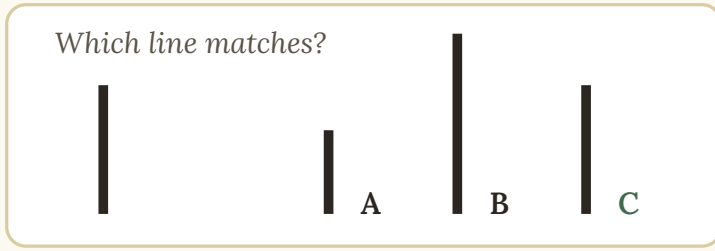

Authority can lead people a long way.

In Stanley Milgram's experiments (Milgram, 1963), many ordinary people kept giving what they believed were painful electric shocks to a stranger because a man in a lab coat told them to, although no shocks were real. Burger (2009) repeated part of the study safely and found similar results. The studies are also debated. Later researchers, such as Haslam and Reicher (2012), argue that people went along when they believed in the cause, and many people refused.

A nurse is told by a senior doctor to give a dose that looks wrong to her. She checks, speaks up and turns out to be right, and checking was the loyal thing to do. Think of one person whose word you tend to follow without question, and whether there is anything you would want to check next time, perhaps with "Before I do this, can I check one thing?"

We go along more than we think

And one other voice changes a lot.

Alone against the group went along on about 1 in 3 answers

With one ally

going along fell sharply

One calm, kind voice saying "I see it differently" often frees others to say so too.

Asch (1956). About a quarter of people never went along. Across 133 later studies the effect held but varied by time and culture (Bond and Smith, 1996).

FIGURE 8 We go along more than we think, and one other voice changes a lot. In Asch's studies, going along fell sharply when one other person gave the right answer.

04

“Us and them” forms fast.

Part of how we see ourselves comes from our groups, whether that is a family, a town, a team, a faith or a job. Tajfel and Turner (1979) called this social identity. It brings pride and loyalty, and it also makes us quick to favour “us” and to see “them” as all the same, even when the groups are formed on almost nothing. Two branches of one family always sit apart at weddings, and nobody can quite remember why. One year a cousin quietly swaps the seating plan, and the two sides discover a shared weakness for terrible music.

Think of a “them” in your life and name one person from that group as an individual, with something they like and something they worry about.

05

Norms are the rules nobody wrote down.

Every group has norms about what you wear, how you speak, what you laugh at and what you never mention, and we often guess them wrong. In studies at one university, Prentice and Miller (1993) found that most students were privately less comfortable with heavy drinking than they thought everyone else was. Each person thought they were the odd one out, so everyone kept going along. In one office everyone answers emails at midnight because they think it’s expected, until a manager says, quite casually, that she doesn’t expect replies after six, and the relief is almost audible. In my years as a government auditor I heard “we have always done it this way” constantly, and it usually meant a norm nobody had checked in years.

Pick one unwritten rule in a group you belong to and ask one person, privately, what they really think of it.

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-03 · free to print
One owner per job
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-03

06

Cultures differ, and so do people inside them.

Cultures differ in how much they put the individual or the group first, which researchers call individualism and collectivism (Hofstede, 1980). In some, standing out is admired, and in others fitting in and keeping harmony are signs of maturity. Labels need care, though. A large review by Oyserman and colleagues (2002) found the differences were smaller and less tidy than often claimed, and individuals vary hugely within every culture. A woman raised in a close-knit family moves in with a partner who grew up being told to do his own thing. He sees her daily calls home as clingy and she sees his rare calls as cold, while each is following the rules they learned.

Name one thing you think of as simply how people should behave, then ask where you learned it and whether someone else might have learned the opposite.

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 6

House rules for us

Shona and her son Dexter, 15

House rules for us

Person A
Shona

Person B
Dexter

Date of this list
3 October 2026

Our rules, and who keeps each one

Rule	Who keeps it	Why it matters to Shona	Why it matters to Dexter
Phones charge in the kitchen from 10 on school nights	Both (decide together)	I sleep better knowing you're not up at 2	Fine if it's both our phones, not just mine
Homework before games, Monday to Thursday	Dexter	Less nagging from me	Weekends are mine, then
Say where you're going and when you'll be back	Both (decide together)	So I don't worry	Mum does it too, so it's fair
Friday tea together, no phones at the table	Both (decide together)	It's my favourite hour of the week	Only if I can pick the food sometimes

DOES EVERY JOB HAVE AN OWNER?

Rules with someone who keeps them

4 of 4. Every rule has someone who keeps it.

Changes to the list

Date	What changed	Who
3 Oct 2026	Dexter asked for weekends without phone rules. Agreed for a month, then we look again.	Shona and Dexter

The norms nobody wrote down, written down, with room for both of them to change them.

Fill in your own: House rules for us

07

Every family is a small culture.

Families have their own norms about how loud people are and how feelings are shown. Some things get talked about and some never do, and there are rules about how you say sorry, if you do. We often only notice our family's rules when we live with someone from a different family, and Where your lens came from (Book 1, Chapter 1, page 9) looks at the rules you grew up with. Two housemates clash over the kitchen because in one's family you wash up straight after eating and in the other's you leave it to soak and do it in the morning. Neither of them is lazy or fussy. Each is following a rule from a kitchen two hundred miles away.

Write down three rules from the family you grew up in. Keep one you value, and question one you don't, perhaps by asking, "What did yours do? Shall we make our own rule?"

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 7

Kitchen-table check-in: family plan

Amaka and Chris, new parents, with Chris's parents

Our family plan

A plan for the family, not a list of chores.

Who's in this plan (optional)
Amaka, Chris, Nana Joy and Grandad Pete

Visits
Sunday lunch every other week, 12 to 3. Text the day before.

Advice
Ask first: "Do you want ideas, or just to talk?"

The baby's or children's routines
Nap at 1. Back to sleep on her back, always. Ask us before any new food.

A regular job for a grandparent or relative
Grandad Pete does the Tuesday morning walk with the pram.

We'll look at this again on
The first Sunday of December

ON THE CARD

One topic at a time. We're on the same side.

Two family cultures, one plan written on purpose.

Fill in your own: Kitchen-table check-in: family plan

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Kitchen-table check-in spreadloveandacceptance.com/check-ins

08

Online groups pull harder and faster.

Group chats, forums and social media make group pressure quicker and more public, because likes and replies show the norm instantly. In a study of over half a million posts, Brady and colleagues (2017) found that messages with more moral and emotional words spread further, mostly among people who already agreed. Outrage travels fast while quiet doubts stay put. A parents' group chat turns against a teacher after one angry post about a detention, forty messages in an hour. A dad who knows the teacher a little sends a calm message saying he'd want to hear her side before anyone decides anything. Two other parents agree with him. The thread goes quiet, and stays quiet.

Before you react to a heated post, wait ten minutes, then decide whether to reply in public, in private, or not at all.

09

You can belong and still be yourself.

Belonging means being accepted as you are, while fitting in means changing in order to be accepted (Chapter 4, page 61, says more). Good groups have room for difference. It helps to know your own values, to have more than one group and to have at least one ally, and in Asch's experiments, when just one other person gave the right answer, going along with the group dropped sharply. A teenager who loves chess gets teased about it by his mates. He doesn't drop chess and he doesn't drop his mates. He joins the club that meets in the library on Wednesdays as well, and with two groups, neither one gets to decide who he is.

Write down three things you value, and the next time a group pulls on you, check whether the pull is in line with them.

10

Disagree kindly, and early.

You don't have to choose between going along and starting a war. A kind disagreement is short and calm, it is about the issue rather than the people, and it leaves room for others. Speaking early is easier than speaking late, and a private word often works better than speaking in front of everyone. Some people keep a sentence ready, such as "I see it a bit differently. Can I say why?", "I'm not comfortable with that joke" or "Can we hear from people who haven't spoken yet?"

Choose the sentence that sounds most like you and say it out loud a few times, so it is ready when you need it.

YOUR PART, AND ONLY YOUR PART. You can notice the pull to fit in, check what you actually think, choose your groups, and say "I see it differently" kindly.

You can't control what a group does, and you don't have to stay in a group that keeps asking you to hide who you are or go against what's right. If a group, a family or a partner uses pressure, fear or threats to control you, that's not belonging. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) has free, private help.

THURSDAY, 9:40PM

You delete the laughing face and message your aunt privately instead. "I know it was meant to be funny, but it might hurt if they see it. Could we leave it?" A few minutes later the joke disappears, followed by a message to you saying it was only a bit of fun and people are too sensitive these days. Later your cousin messages you to say thank you, because she saw it before it went. Your aunt is noticeably short with you at Sunday lunch, and you still don't know whether that will pass.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

If you're a teenager

Group chats are where a lot of friendship happens, and a lot of hurt. Rhys is fifteen when he finds a photo of himself from PE being joked about in his class chat. He doesn't answer back.

He screenshots it and mutes the chat. Then he tells his sister, and together they tell his form tutor. Then a girl in his class messages him privately to say it wasn't funny and that she is sorry she didn't say anything. Most people in a group chat don't like what is happening, and each of them thinks everyone else does.

YOU COULD SAY

"I'm not okay with this. Please delete it." To a friend, "That wasn't okay. Are you alright?" To an adult, "Something's happening online and I need help with it."

ANOTHER WAY TO SEE IT

Small talk about the weather

FROM OUTSIDE Two near-strangers spend five minutes on the weather.

THE LOGIC Strangers need a safe way to check each other out → The weather carries no risk → Easy lines say "I'm friendly, you can relax" → Once both feel safe, real talk can start

IT'S LIKE Musicians tuning up before the concert.

WHY IT FITS Brief, friendly chats with people we hardly know are linked with feeling more connected that day.

THE OTHER SIDE For people who find it pointless, it costs energy and gives no information.

YOU COULD SAY "Small talk is how I say hello."

ONE SMALL STEP Keep two easy lines and one real question ready, then steer towards something you care about.

More situations like this one, each in the same six parts, are free online.
spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it?item=small-talk

In everyday life

Having no group can be as hard as having a pushy one, and groups built around something you enjoy bring belonging along with the activity. Partners bring two families and two sets of rules, which are worth talking about openly before you make your own. Children and teenagers feel peer pressure strongly, and practising a "no" that saves face helps them. Old family roles, the peacekeeper or the black sheep, can be hard to step out of. At work, when everyone agrees too fast, it helps if whoever leads shares their view last and asks each person to name one risk before deciding (more in the full chapter, spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-17-groups-in-depth). And online, you are allowed to mute, leave or take a break from groups that leave you feeling worse.

If you want to help someone else with this

If someone speaks up, back them up, even quietly with "I think that's a fair point," because one ally makes a big difference. In any group you lead, invite quieter people and different views by asking what nobody has thought of yet. If someone seems to be going along against their wishes, ask gently, away from the group, and keep an eye on who gets left out of the chats and the plans, so you can bring them in.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "I noticed you went quiet when they said that. Are you okay?"
> "I'd like to hear what you think, even if it's different."

When to get more help

Group pressure is part of life. It may be time for more help if:

- a group, family or partner controls who you see, what you wear, what you spend or what you believe, or punishes you for disagreeing;
- you feel you can't leave a group without being threatened, shamed or cut off from everyone you know;
- you're being bullied, at school, at work or online;
- being left out or pressured is leaving you very low, anxious or hopeless.

Talk to someone you trust, a counsellor or a doctor. Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety) lists free, private help if someone at home controls or frightens you. For low mood or worry, see Book 2, Chapter 3 (page 49). If you are thinking about ending your life, please tell someone today.

In the US and Canada, call or text 988. In the UK and Ireland, call Samaritans free on 116 123. In Australia, call Lifeline on 13 11 14. In New Zealand, call or text 1737. Anywhere else, findahelpline.com lists free helplines.

This chapter is general education, not therapy.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

Reading on the website

More for your situation

- For teens: friends and pressure
- Family rifts · In-laws
- At work
- For teachers
- Related chapters: Belonging and trust (Chapter 4, page 61) · How we see each other (Chapter 3, page 45) · Values (Book 2, Chapter 7, page 121)

- Help by relationship: find the pages for your situation.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
For teens: friends and pressure
spreadloveandacceptance.com/teens

ONLINE
Family rifts
spreadloveandacceptance.com/family-rifts

ONLINE
In-laws
spreadloveandacceptance.com/library/life

TOOL
Team job list: the 10-minute weekly round
spreadloveandacceptance.com/work

ONLINE
For teachers
spreadloveandacceptance.com/for-teachers

ONLINE
Help by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

WHAT TO REMEMBER

- ✓ The pull to fit in is old and strong.
- ✓ Authority can lead people a long way.
- ✓ Norms are the rules nobody wrote down.
- ✓ Online groups pull harder and faster.
- ✓ Disagree kindly, and early.

THIS CONNECTS TO

Chapter 3 · How we see each other
Bias and the stories we tell page 45

Chapter 4 · Attachment, trust and belonging
Why belonging matters so much page 61

Book 2, Chapter 7 · Values, meaning and a good life
Holding on to your own values Heal and Steady, page 121

PUT IT TO USE

How you connect: how I like to be spoken to
To share how you work best so a group can make room for you spreadloveandacceptance.com/wiring-card

Leading a group
A six-session guide with ground rules that make room for difference spreadloveandacceptance.com/groups

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-17-groups-in-depth

7

BOOK 3 · CHAPTER 7

Helping others well: support without fixing, boundaries, and not burning out

How to help someone without taking over, by asking what they need, listening first, caring without drowning and keeping kind limits, with what to do in a crisis and how to keep going without burning out.

IN THIS CHAPTER

1. Ask what kind of help they want
2. Listening is a kind of help
3. Fixing it for them can take away their power
4. Care without drowning in their feelings
5. Your limits make your help last
6. Notice when you're running on empty
7. In a crisis, stay with them and bring in help
8. Don't wait for someone else to step in
9. Let other people help you too
10. In everyday life
11. Common mix-ups
12. If you want to help someone else with this
13. When to get more help
14. Tools and reading on this site
15. More for your situation

IN SHORT

- Ask what kind of help they want. "Ideas, or just someone to listen?" saves a lot of misfires.
- Listening is help. Fixing a problem for someone can take away their power.

- Your limits make your help last, and caring from a steady place helps more than drowning in their feelings.
- In a crisis, stay and bring in help. It's okay to ask directly about suicide, and to call for help.

WEDNESDAY, 7:15PM

Your friend is telling you about her awful week, and you have five good ideas before she's finished her first sentence. You share all of them, in order, with reasons. She goes quiet and says, "Yeah, maybe." You both hang up feeling a little worse, and neither of you could quite say why.

Most of us want to help the people around us, and helping well is a skill, because good intentions don't always land. This chapter looks at how support works, why fixing can backfire and how to care for others in a way you can keep up. Two tools elsewhere grew out of it: One owner per job (Book 4, Chapter 2, page 27), because carers burn out when everything counts as "just helping" and nobody else owns a job, and How much are you carrying? (Book 4, Chapter 3, page 51), which helps you notice you're running on empty before you snap or stop.

01

Ask what kind of help they want.

Help comes in different kinds. Some people want ideas, some want someone to listen, some want a practical hand such as a meal or a lift, and some just want company. Giving the wrong kind, however kindly, can leave someone feeling unheard, and the simplest fix is to ask.

In the phone call above, a better start might have been, "That sounds like a rotten week. Do you want ideas, or do you just want to vent?" It feels slightly formal the first few times. People tend to love being asked.

> YOU COULD SAY
> "Would ideas help, or would you rather I just listened?" "What would help most right now?"

02

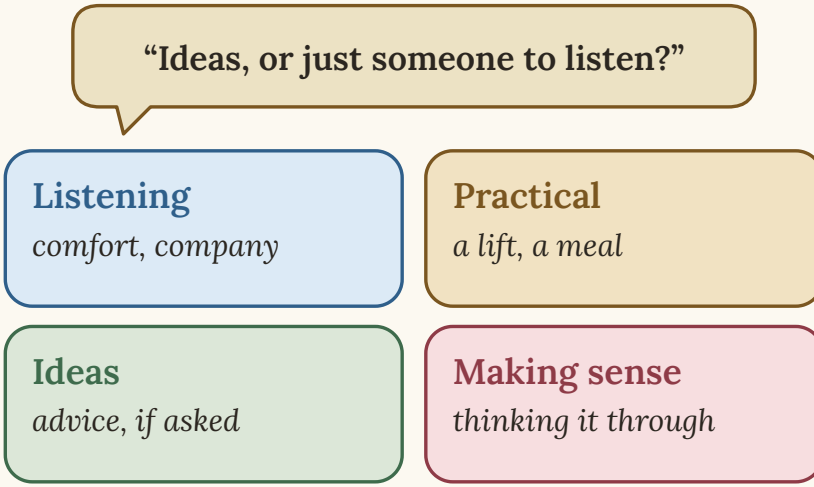

Listening is a kind of help.

Being truly heard helps people calm down and think, and quite often they find their own answer. Good listening means paying attention, letting them finish, checking you understood and showing that their feelings make sense, even if you would feel differently.

Ravi comes home upset about his boss. His partner resists saying "Just quit" and says, "So he criticised you in front of everyone, after you stayed late all week. No wonder you're furious." Ravi's shoulders drop. Ten minutes later he's sketching out his own plan on the back of a takeaway menu, and it's a better plan than "just quit".

Ask what kind of help they want

The wrong kind of help can feel like not being heard.

- Fixing it for them can take away their power.
- Care from a steady place. Your limits make your help last.
- In a crisis, stay with them and bring in help.

Kinds of support after House (1981). Support helps most when it fits what the person needs (Cutrona and Russell, 1990), though the evidence for exact matching is mixed.

FIGURE 9 Ask what kind of help they want. Fixing it for them can take away their power, and your limits make your help last.

WORDS YOU COULD USE

"So what happened was… Have I got that right?" "That makes sense. Anyone would feel that way."

In one conversation today, listen for two whole minutes without giving advice, then sum up what you heard. Two minutes is longer than you think.

SUGARFOOT

Sometimes the best help is sitting close and listening, with no fixing. Listening takes energy too, so check your own tank now and then.

WORKPAPER WP-02 How much are you carrying? · free to print · spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-02

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-02 · free to print
How much are you carrying?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-02

03

Fixing it for them can take away their power.

When we love someone, we want to make the problem go away. Doing things for people that they could do themselves can leave them feeling less capable, though, so helping well often means helping someone do it themselves, which respects that it is their life and their choice.

Rosalind's twenty-four-year-old son is struggling with a job application for the council, and she is itching to rewrite it; she can see three things wrong with the first paragraph alone. She asks instead whether he'd like her to read it and say what stands out. He makes the changes himself, and when he gets the interview he's quietly, enormously proud, and so is she, though she keeps that to herself.

> THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF
> "Is this mine to fix, or theirs to solve with my support?" "What do they want to do here?"

04

Care without drowning in their feelings.

Feeling someone's pain as if it were your own can wear you out fast. Researchers separate this "empathic distress" from compassion, which is warm concern from a steadier place, still caring deeply without sinking alongside the other person. A steady helper is more use than a second person drowning.

When Abi's housemate went through a breakup, Abi cried with her every night and stopped sleeping, and after a week she was wrecked. After that she stayed kind and present and also took breaks, a run in the mornings, an evening with her own friends, and kept reminding herself that this was her housemate's pain to feel and hers to keep company with.

> THINGS TO TELL YOURSELF
> "I can be with them in this without making it mine." "I care, and I'm steady."

05

Your limits make your help last.

Saying yes to everything leads in the long run to resentment, exhaustion and eventually to not being able to help at all. Limits tell people what you can give, so your yes means something, and a kind no that comes with an offer of what you can do is still help.

Kojo's sister keeps asking to borrow money, fifty here, eighty there, and none of it comes back. He loves her and he is running out. So he tells her, "I can't lend money any more. I can help you go through your bills on Sunday, if you'd like."

WAYS TO SAY IT

"I can't do that, but I can do this." "I want to help, and I need to stop at nine tonight."

If there's something you're giving that you can't keep giving, plan a smaller version you could offer instead.

06

Notice when you're running on empty.

People who help a lot, such as carers, parents, nurses, teachers and the friend everyone calls, can burn out. The signs include feeling exhausted most of the time, or numb and cynical about the people you help, or dreading the next call. They mean that you need help too.

Helen has looked after her husband since his stroke two years ago. She snaps at him over the remote control and then feels terrible for the rest of the day, and when she mentions it to her doctor, almost in passing, the doctor says it sounds like carer strain. A local carers' group on Tuesday mornings and a few hours of respite each week give her back a little of herself.

THOUGHTS YOU COULD TRY

"Looking after myself is part of looking after them."

THIS WEEK.

Rate your energy from 1 to 10 each evening for a week. If it's often 3 or lower, ask someone for one specific kind of help. See Caring for someone you love.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Caring for someone you love
spreadloveandacceptance.com/caregivers

07

In a crisis, stay with them and bring in help.

If someone tells you they're thinking of ending their life, or you're worried they might be, it's okay to ask them directly. Research, such as a review led by Dazzi and colleagues (2014), suggests asking about suicide doesn't put the idea in someone's head; it can bring relief. You don't have to be their therapist. Your job is to listen, stay with them, and help them reach trained support.

For example (a coworker): A colleague says, "Sometimes I think everyone would be better off without me." Kirsty says gently: "I'm really glad you told me. Are you thinking about ending your life?" She says she's had thoughts. Kirsty stays with her and they call a crisis line together.

WORDS TO TRY

"Are you thinking about suicide?" "I'm glad you told me. You don't have to go through this alone. Let's call someone together."

ONE SMALL STEP.

Save a crisis number in your phone now, so you have it if you ever need it. In the US and Canada, call or text 988. In the UK and Ireland, call Samaritans free on 116 123. In Australia, call Lifeline on 13 11 14. In New Zealand, call or text 1737. Anywhere else, findahelpline.com lists free helplines. If someone is in immediate danger, call your local emergency number.

08

Don't wait for someone else to step in.

When lots of people see something go wrong, each person can assume someone else will act. Psychologists call this the bystander effect, and knowing about it helps you break it. Small, safe actions count, such as asking "Are you okay?" or fetching a member of staff.

On a train, a man is making a young woman uncomfortable, leaning in, asking where she's getting off. Yvonne doesn't confront him. She sits down next to the woman and asks brightly, "Hi! Is this the train to Leeds?" The woman joins in the chat with obvious relief, and at the next stop the man moves down the carriage.

YOU COULD SAY

"Are you okay? Do you need anything?" To someone else nearby: "Can you get the driver? I'll stay here."

It helps to decide in advance what your safe move would be (distracting, getting help, checking in afterwards), because people with a plan act and people without one tend to freeze.

09

Let other people help you too.

Helping goes both ways, and people who are good at giving help are often bad at receiving it. Letting others help is a gift to them too, because most people like being useful to someone they care about, and relationships where only one person ever helps tend to feel uneven over time.

Nkechi said "We're fine, thanks" to every offer after the baby came, including several when she very much wasn't. When she finally said yes to a neighbour's offer of a lasagne, the neighbour was delighted. These days they walk their buggies round the park together on Thursday mornings. Say yes to the next small offer of help you get, even if you could manage without it.

> WORDS YOU COULD USE
> "Yes, thank you. That would really help." "Could you do one thing for me this week?"

FILLED-IN EXAMPLE 8

One owner per job: sharing the care

Margaret and Alan, with their daughter Sue

One owner per job: sharing the care

Person A
Margaret

Person B
Alan

Person C
Sue

Date of this list
6 October 2026

Who owns each job

Job	How often	Roughly how long?	Owner	Helper or backup	Notes
Medicines and the pill box (as the care team directs)	Weekly	0.5	Margaret	Sue	Sue checks it on Sundays
Book and go along to medical appointments	As needed	3	Sue	Margaret	Sue drives; Mum comes too
Insurance and paperwork	Monthly	1	Alan	Sue	Dad can do this from his chair
Night care and night-time calls	Daily	1	Margaret		Ask the nurse about a night sitter
Sunday call with the family	Weekly	0.5	Alan
Book respite: a break for the main carer	Monthly	0.5	Sue		Mum's Thursday afternoon off

Job	How often	Roughly how long?	Owner	Helper or backup	Notes
Groceries and meals	Weekly	2	Sue	Margaret	Online shop, Sue orders

DOES EVERY JOB HAVE AN OWNER?

Jobs with an owner

7 of 7. Every job has an owner.

Who's carrying more right now

Margaret 63% · Alan 9% · Sue 28%. Does this match what you agreed? If it doesn't match, ask which job could move first. It's a starting point for a talk, not a scorecard.

Changes to the list

Date	What changed	Who
6 Oct 2026	Sue takes Tuesday nights from next week, so Margaret gets one full night's sleep.	Margaret, Alan and Sue

This is about who owns each job, not medical advice.

Fill in your own: One owner per job (sharing the care)

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-03 · free to print

One owner per job

spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-03

YOUR PART, AND ONLY YOUR PART. You can offer help and listen well, and be honest about your limits. You can't make someone accept help or get better on your timetable. Their life and their choices are theirs. If someone is in danger, your part is to bring in help, not to carry it alone.

THE NEXT WEDNESDAY, 7:15PM

Your friend calls again, and this time you ask whether she wants ideas or just to talk it out. She laughs and says just talk, so you listen, through her manager and her landlord and the cat's vet bill (£212, for a sock). At the end she says she thinks she knows what she's going to do, and you realise you haven't offered a single idea, and that it was a much better phone call.

In everyday life

Helping yourself counts too, and you can ask yourself the same question, whether you need ideas right now or just some rest. Caring for a parent or a child with extra needs is long-haul help, so share the load early (see Caring for someone you love). The friend everyone calls needs someone to call too. Covering for a struggling coworker is kind for a week, and after that it needs a real conversation with the team. In an emergency, point to one person, as in "You in the blue coat, please call for help," because a crowd often waits for someone else. If you have ADHD, helping can feel interesting and urgent, so a fast yes comes easily, and "I'd like to help. Let me check my week and come back to you tonight" gives you time. More in the full chapter.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Caring for someone you love
spreadloveandacceptance.com/caregivers

Common mix-ups

- "Helping means solving the problem." Often, helping means listening, being there or helping someone find their own answer.
- "Good helpers never say no." Good helpers last because they know their limits.
- "Asking about suicide might give them the idea." Research suggests it doesn't, and asking can help someone open up.
- "I'll make it worse if I step in." There are small, safe ways to help. Doing nothing often feels worse for the person in trouble.

If you want to help someone else with this

The helpers around you need looking after too.

- Notice the helpers, such as the carer, the friend everyone calls and the coworker who always covers, and ask them how they are as if you mean it.
- Offer specific help. "Can I take the kids on Saturday morning?" is easier to accept than "Let me know if you need anything."

- Give them permission to rest. “You’re allowed a night off. I’ve got this.”
- If a helper seems burned out, share Caring for someone you love or suggest they talk to a doctor.

> WAYS TO SAY IT
> “You look after everyone. Who looks after you?” “I’d love to do something for you this week. What would help?”

When to get more help

- If someone is in danger now, call your local emergency number.
- If someone talks about suicide, stay with them and contact a crisis line together. In the US and Canada, call or text 988. In the UK and Ireland, call Samaritans free on 116 123. In Australia, call Lifeline on 13 11 14. In New Zealand, call or text 1737. Anywhere else, findahelpline.com lists free helplines.
- If someone tells you they’re being hurt or controlled at home, believe them, don’t confront the other person yourself, and share Not safe at home? (spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety)
- If you’re burned out as a helper or carer, talk to your doctor, a carers’ organisation or a counsellor. Respite and support are not luxuries.
- If helping someone is becoming unsafe for you, step back and bring in professionals. You can still care from a safer distance.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Not safe at home?
spreadloveandacceptance.com/safety

Tools and reading on the website

Tools helpers you use on the website

- Check-ins, for tender conversations, and Professor Puddles if you want help finding words.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Kitchen-table check-in spreadloveandacceptance.com/check-ins

TOOL
Ask Professor Puddles
spreadloveandacceptance.com/ask

More for your situation

- Carers: Caring for someone you love · When one of you is ill
- Friends: Friends
- Parents and grandparents: For parents · For grandparents · When a child has ADHD
- At work: At work · For counsellors, coaches and group leaders
- After a loss: Grief and later life
- Find your own starting point: Help by relationship.

A limit to keep in mind: This chapter is about everyday helping. It isn't training in crisis care or therapy. When someone's safety is at risk, the most helpful thing you can do is bring in people trained to help.

SCAN TO OPEN

ONLINE
Caring for someone you love
spreadloveandacceptance.com/caregivers

ONLINE
When one of you is ill
spreadloveandacceptance.com/when-one-is-ill

ONLINE
Friends
spreadloveandacceptance.com/friends

ONLINE
For parents
spreadloveandacceptance.com/parents

ONLINE
For grandparents
spreadloveandacceptance.com/grandparents

ONLINE
When a child has ADHD spreadloveandacceptance.com/adhd-kids

TOOL
Team job list: the 10-minute weekly round
spreadloveandacceptance.com/work

ONLINE
For counsellors, coaches and group leaders spreadloveandacceptance.com/for-counselors

ONLINE
Grief and later life
spreadloveandacceptance.com/grief

ONLINE
Help by relationship
spreadloveandacceptance.com/by-relationship

THIS CONNECTS TO

Book 4, Chapter 1 · The work nobody sees
The care work nobody sees
Share the Load, page 9

Book 4, Chapter 2 · Is the split working?
Sharing the load so it lasts
Share the Load, page 27

Book 2, Chapter 4 · Loss, grief and big life changes
Helping someone through grief
Heal and Steady, page 69

Book 2, Chapter 1 · Stress and the nervous system
Noticing your own stress first
Heal and Steady, page 9

PUT IT TO USE

Check-ins
For tender conversations, and Professor Puddles if you want help finding words spreadloveandacceptance.com/check-ins

Stories from philosophy: the circles of Hierocles spreadloveandacceptance.com/learn/index-in-depth

Go deeper (free online) The full chapter, with the research, more examples and more to try: spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/understanding-12-helping-in-depth

Words for hard moments

Some ways to say the hard parts, collected in one place. Change the words until they sound like you.

TO BEGIN

> "Is now a good time to talk about Saturday, or would tomorrow be better?"
>
> "Something has been on my mind, and I'd rather tell you than let it grow."
>
> "I'd like to understand how it looked from your side."

TO CHECK WHAT THEY MEANT

> "When you said 'fine', did you mean fine, or not really?"
>
> "Can I check I've got this right?"
>
> "What did you hear me say?"

TO PAUSE

> "I need twenty minutes. I'll come back at half past."
>
> "I'm not going anywhere. I just need some quiet."

TO PUT IT RIGHT

> "That came out wrong. Can I try again?"
>
> "I think we both meant well, and it still went sideways."
>
> "I'm sorry I was sharp with you earlier."

WHEN SOMEONE IS STRUGGLING

> "Do you want ideas, or would you like me to just listen?"
>
> "That sounds hard. Tell me more."
>
> "I can do Tuesday evenings. Who else could we ask?"

Questions people ask

Some questions this book tends to raise, with short answers and where to read more.

We care about each other but keep falling out. Where do we start?

Start with pace. Two people who both care can still run at different speeds, talk things through at different times and feel urgency about different things. Why we get out of tune (Chapter 1, page 9) helps you spot which one is catching you, and the workpaper Same moment, different speeds lets you compare your answers side by side.

SCAN TO OPEN

WORKPAPER WP-12 · free to print
Same moment, different speeds
spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill/wp-12

Our messages keep going wrong. Any quick fixes?

Read a message twice before you reply, and assume the warmest tone that fits the words. Short texts lose their tone on the way, so a quick "Do you mean…?" saves a lot. How communication works (Chapter 2, page 25) covers this, and the Chat analyzer on the website lets you check how a message may land before you send it.

SCAN TO OPEN

TOOL
Chat analyzer
spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

My family remember things completely differently from me. Who is right?

Often both of you, a little. Memory keeps what mattered to each person and quietly fills in the rest. How we see each other (Chapter 3, page 45) explains why, and suggests asking "What do you remember about that day?" before you share your own version.

How do I help someone without wearing myself out?

Ask what kind of help they want, do the part you can keep doing, and say plainly where your limit is. Help that lasts usually comes from more than one person. Helping others well (Chapter 7, page 113) has a part on noticing when you are running on empty.

I feel like I don't quite belong anywhere. Is something wrong with me?

No. Feeling on the edge of a group is common, especially after a move, a breakup or a change of job. Belonging tends to grow from small, repeated contact with the same few people. Attachment, trust and belonging (Chapter 4, page 61) and Groups, influence and culture (Chapter 6, page 95) both have ideas to try.

Workpapers and tools in this book

Every workpaper and tool this book points to, in two separate lists, with the chapters and pages that mention each one. All of them are free at spreadloveandacceptance.com, with no account, and what you type stays on your device.

Workpapers mentioned in this book

Pages to fill in, on your own or together.

WORKPAPER WP-02 How much are you carrying? · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-02

In: Helping others well (page 113)

WORKPAPER WP-03 One owner per job · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-03

In: Groups, influence and culture (page 95), Helping others well (page 113)

WORKPAPER WP-09 Say it so it lands · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-09

In: Why we get out of tune (page 9), How communication works (page 25)

WORKPAPER WP-12 Same moment, different speeds · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-12

In: Questions people ask (page 132)

WORKPAPER WP-13 The 90-second daily check-in · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-13

In: Why we get out of tune (page 9)

WORKPAPER WP-15 Keep your little rituals alive · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wp-15

In: Closeness and love (page 77)

Tools mentioned in this book

Interactive helpers to use on the site.

TOOL Chat analyzer · spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator
In: How communication works (page 25), How we see each other (page 45), Questions people ask (page 132)

TOOL Rewind the talk · spreadloveandacceptance.com/carrier-wave-decoder
In: Why we get out of tune (page 9), How communication works (page 25), How we see each other (page 45)

TOOL Cool-down corner: make a pause plan · spreadloveandacceptance.com/pursue-withdraw
In: Attachment, trust and belonging (page 61)

TOOL Kitchen-table check-in · spreadloveandacceptance.com/check-ins
In: Groups, influence and culture (page 95), Helping others well (page 113)

TOOL Stay close: one small idea · spreadloveandacceptance.com/bonding
In: Attachment, trust and belonging (page 61), Closeness and love (page 77)

TOOL How you connect: how I like to be spoken to · spreadloveandacceptance.com/wiring-card
In: How communication works (page 25), Groups, influence and culture (page 95)

TOOL Cool-down corner: Upset right now? · spreadloveandacceptance.com/upset-right-now
In: How communication works (page 25), Attachment, trust and belonging (page 61), Closeness and love (page 77)

TOOL My weather today: the sky (the ladder) · spreadloveandacceptance.com/quick-checks
In: Why we get out of tune (page 9)

TOOL Ask Professor Puddles · spreadloveandacceptance.com/ask
In: Helping others well (page 113)

TOOL Plan it once: handoff bag for two homes · spreadloveandacceptance.com/co-parenting
In: How communication works (page 25), How we see each other (page 45)

TOOL Plan it once: room agreement for roommates · spreadloveandacceptance.com/sharing-a-room
In: How communication works (page 25)

TOOL Team job list: the 10-minute weekly round · spreadloveandacceptance.com/work

In: Attachment, trust and belonging (page 61), Groups, influence and culture (page 95), Helping others well (page 113)

Words used in this book

The book's own words, each in one plain sentence. All of them are at spreadloveandacceptance.com/glossary.

Battery

Your battery is how much energy you have left today. Full means you have room to spare; low means you're running on empty. "How much are you carrying?" measures the other side of it, how full your stress tank is: a fuller tank means a lower battery.

Calm-down plan

Your calm-down plan (once called the Calm-Down Kit) is your own short list of what settles your body, chosen ahead of time so you don't have to think when you're wound up.

Carrier wave

The carrier wave is the feeling that travels underneath the words: the tone that arrives before the meaning does.

Check-in

A check-in is a short, planned talk that keeps small things small. The daily one takes about ninety seconds, with no debating.

Complacency

Complacency is what happens when something has worked for a long time and you stop checking on it. It isn't laziness or a lack of love. It's a setup nobody has looked at lately.

Drift

Drift is how two people slowly fall out of step when nobody checks in, even when nothing is wrong.

Flooded

Flooded means being so wound up that listening stops working for a while. The kind thing is a short pause with a time to come back.

Frequency

Your frequency is your natural pace: how fast you decide, talk, reply and recover.

Kinship care

When a grandparent, aunt, older sibling or family friend raises a child whose parents can't.

The ladder

Three everyday states: calm and connected, revved up, running on empty. My weather today calls them clear, gusty and fogged in. A best guess about your state, not a measurement.

The load

The load is all the work of a shared life, including the thinking, planning and remembering that nobody sees.

My weather today

My weather today is a one-minute check on your own conditions today, like sleep, stress and energy: Clear means calm and connected, Gusty means revved up, and Fogged in means running on empty.

Owner (one owner per job)

The owner of a job is the one person who makes sure it gets done from start to finish, so nobody has to keep asking.

Person A and Person B

Person A and Person B are simply the two people on a two-person worksheet or tool. They are labels, not a ranking.

Pressure

Pressure, in My weather today, is how much you were already carrying today: light, building or heavy. Behind the forecast sits a rough tally from 0 to 100; under 45 leaves room in the day, 65 or more means go gently. It is a reading of what you told it, not a score or a grade.

Repair

A repair is anything that stops a tense moment from getting worse, like a joke, a softer tone or "Can we start over?"

Retune

To retune is to notice you've fallen out of step with someone and adjust together: slower, softer, or at a better time.

Static

Static is the crackle between two people when the words are fine but the tone, pace or timing doesn't match.

Stress tank

How much stress you are already carrying, from How much are you carrying?, scored from 0 (empty) to 1 (full). Under 0.30 is light, 0.30 to 0.59 medium, 0.60 and up high. A fuller tank means less room to take more on. (Your battery is the other side of it: energy left.)

Talk window

The talk window says whether now is a good time for a big conversation: open, wait a little, or closed for today.

Unbilled debt

Unbilled debt is the work of a shared life that got done but was never noticed or thanked.

Wired differently

Being wired differently means your brain works in a less common way, such as being autistic, ADHD, dyslexic or highly sensitive, which changes how words land.

Wiring

Your wiring is the way your brain and senses take in words, sound, change and people. It stays the same from day to day.

Workpaper

A page you fill in, on your own or with someone, about your own week or your own side. Every workpaper is free to print or to fill in on the website.

Your lens

Your lens is the set of understandings about yourself, other people and what they owe you that you picked up growing up and still use without noticing.

Research notes

The 129 studies and books these chapters mention, in short. Each one was looked up and checked. The full list, with what each study found, how strong the finding is and where to read it, is free online:
`spreadloveandacceptance.com/research`.

Chapter 1 Why we get out of tune

Bryant, C. M., Conger, R. D., & Meehan, J. M. (2001). The influence of in-laws on change in marital success.

Carrère, S., & Gottman, J. M. (1999). Predicting divorce among newlyweds from the first three minutes of a marital conflict discussion.

Gilovich, T., Savitsky, K., & Medvec, V. H. (1998). The illusion of transparency: Biased assessments of others' ability to read one's emotional states.

Gordon, T. (1970). P.E.T.: Parent Effectiveness Training.

Gottman, J. M. (1994). What predicts divorce? The relationship between marital processes and marital outcomes.

Kruger, J., Epley, N., Parker, J., & Ng, Z.-W. (2005). Egocentrism over e-mail: Can we communicate as well as we think?

Lally, P., van Jaarsveld, C. H. M., Potts, H. W. W., & Wardle, J. (2010). How are habits formed: Modelling habit formation in the real world.

Lambert, N. M., Fincham, F. D., Stillman, T. F., Graham, S. M., & Beach, S. R. H. (2010). Motivating change in relationships: Can prayer increase forgiveness?

Lieberman, M. D., Eisenberger, N. I., Crockett, M. J., Tom, S. M., Pfeifer, J. H., & Way, B. M. (2007). Putting feelings into words: Affect labeling disrupts amygdala activity in response to affective stimuli.

Mahoney, A. (2010). Religion in families, 1999–2009: A relational spirituality framework.

Milton, D. E. M. (2012). On the ontological status of autism: The "double empathy problem".

Rosenberg, M. B. (1999). Nonviolent Communication: A Language of Compassion (later editions: A Language of Life).

Ross, L. (1977). The intuitive psychologist and his shortcomings: Distortions in the attribution process.

Savitsky, K., Keysar, B., Epley, N., Carter, T., & Swanson, A. (2011). The closeness-communication bias: Increased egocentrism among friends versus strangers.

Yoo, S.-S., Gujar, N., Hu, P., Jolesz, F. A., & Walker, M. P. (2007). The human emotional brain without sleep—a prefrontal amygdala disconnect.

Chapter 2 How communication works

Carrère, S., & Gottman, J. M. (1999). Predicting divorce among newlyweds from the first three minutes of a marital conflict discussion.

Crompton, C. J., Ropar, D., Evans-Williams, C. V. M., Flynn, E. G., & Fletcher-Watson, S. (2020). Autistic peer-to-peer information transfer is highly effective.

Daft, R. L., & Lengel, R. H. (1986). Organizational information requirements, media richness and structural design.

Epley, N., & Schroeder, J. (2014). Mistakenly seeking solitude.

Gilovich, T., Savitsky, K., & Medvec, V. H. (1998). The illusion of transparency: Biased assessments of others' ability to read one's emotional states.

Gordon, T. (1970). P.E.T.: Parent Effectiveness Training.

Gottman, J. M. (1994). What predicts divorce? The relationship between marital processes and marital outcomes.

Gottman, J. M., Coan, J., Carrère, S., & Swanson, C. (1998). Predicting marital happiness and stability from newlywed interactions.

Gunraj, D. N., Drumm-Hewitt, A. M., Dashow, E. M., Upadhyay, S. S. N., & Klin, C. M. (2016). Texting insincerely: The role of the period in text messaging.

Kruger, J., Epley, N., Parker, J., & Ng, Z.-W. (2005). Egocentrism over e-mail: Can we communicate as well as we think?

Malinowski, B. (1923). The problem of meaning in primitive languages.

Milton, D. E. M. (2012). On the ontological status of autism: The "double empathy problem".

Pinker, S., Nowak, M. A., & Lee, J. J. (2008). The logic of indirect speech.

Rosenberg, M. B. (1999). Nonviolent Communication: A Language of Compassion (later editions: A Language of Life).

Sandstrom, G. M., & Dunn, E. W. (2014). Is efficiency overrated? Minimal social interactions lead to belonging and positive affect.

Savitsky, K., Keysar, B., Epley, N., Carter, T., & Swanson, A. (2011). The closeness-communication bias: Increased egocentrism among friends versus strangers.

Schegloff, E. A., Jefferson, G., & Sacks, H. (1977). The preference for self-correction in the organization of repair in conversation.

Tronick, E., Als, H., Adamson, L., Wise, S., & Brazelton, T. B. (1978). The infant's response to entrapment between contradictory messages in face-to-face interaction.

Watzlawick, P., Beavin [Bavelas], J. H., & Jackson, D. D. (1967). Pragmatics of Human Communication: A Study of Interactional Patterns, Pathologies, and Paradoxes.

Weger, H., Jr., Castle Bell, G., Minei, E. M., & Robinson, M. C. (2014). The relative effectiveness of active listening in initial interactions.

Chapter 3 How we see each other

Crompton, C. J., Ropar, D., Evans-Williams, C. V. M., Flynn, E. G., & Fletcher-Watson, S. (2020). Autistic peer-to-peer information transfer is highly effective.

Epley, N. (2014). Mindwise: How We Understand What Others Think, Believe, Feel, and Want.

Eyal, T., Steffel, M., & Epley, N. (2018). Perspective mistaking: Accurately understanding the mind of another requires getting perspective, not taking perspective.

Hastorf, A. H., & Cantril, H. (1954). They saw a game: A case study.

Jones, E. E., & Harris, V. A. (1967). The attribution of attitudes.

Jones, E. E., & Nisbett, R. E. (1971). The actor and the observer: Divergent perceptions of the causes of behavior.

Malle, B. F. (2006). The actor-observer asymmetry in attribution: A (surprising) meta-analysis.

Milton, D. E. M. (2012). On the ontological status of autism: The "double empathy problem".

Murray, D., Lesser, M., & Lawson, W. (2005). Attention, monotropism and the diagnostic criteria for autism.

Pronin, E., Lin, D. Y., & Ross, L. (2002). The bias blind spot: Perceptions of bias in self versus others.

Ross, L. (1977). The intuitive psychologist and his shortcomings: Distortions in the attribution process.

Ross, L., & Ward, A. (1996). Naive realism in everyday life: Implications for social conflict and misunderstanding.

Sasson, N. J., Faso, D. J., Nugent, J., Lovell, S., Kennedy, D. P., & Grossman, R. B. (2017). Neurotypical peers are less willing to interact with those with autism based on thin slice judgments.

Tversky, A., & Kahneman, D. (1973). Availability: A heuristic for judging frequency and probability.

Chapter 4 Attachment, trust and belonging

Ainsworth, M. D. S., Blehar, M. C., Waters, E., & Wall, S. (1978). Patterns of Attachment: A Psychological Study of the Strange Situation.

Baumeister, R. F., & Leary, M. R. (1995). The need to belong: Desire for interpersonal attachments as a fundamental human motivation.

Bowlby, J. (1969). Attachment and Loss, Vol. 1: Attachment.

Brennan, K. A., Clark, C. L., & Shaver, P. R. (1998). Self-report measurement of adult attachment: An integrative overview.

Cacioppo, J. T., & Patrick, W. (2008). Loneliness: Human Nature and the Need for Social Connection.

Coan, J. A., & Sbarra, D. A. (2015). Social baseline theory: The social regulation of risk and effort.

Coan, J. A., Schaefer, H. S., & Davidson, R. J. (2006). Lending a hand: Social regulation of the neural response to threat.

Crompton, C. J., Ropar, D., Evans-Williams, C. V. M., Flynn, E. G., & Fletcher-Watson, S. (2020). Autistic peer-to-peer information transfer is highly effective.

Edmondson, A. (1999). Psychological safety and learning behavior in work teams.

Eisenberger, N. I., Lieberman, M. D., & Williams, K. D. (2003). Does rejection hurt? An fMRI study of social exclusion.

Epley, N., & Schroeder, J. (2014). Mistakenly seeking solitude.

Fraley, R. C., Hudson, N. W., Heffernan, M. E., & Segal, N. (2015). Are adult attachment styles categorical or dimensional? A taxometric analysis of general and relationship-specific attachment orientations.

Gottman, J. M., & Levenson, R. W. (1992). Marital processes predictive of later dissolution: Behavior, physiology, and health.

Hall, J. A. (2019). How many hours does it take to make a friend?

Hazan, C., & Shaver, P. (1987). Romantic love conceptualized as an attachment process.

Holt-Lunstad, J., Smith, T. B., & Layton, J. B. (2010). Social relationships and mortality risk: A meta-analytic review.

Hull, L., Petrides, K. V., Allison, C., Smith, P., Baron-Cohen, S., Lai, M.-C., & Mandy, W. (2017). "Putting on my best normal": Social camouflaging in adults with autism spectrum conditions.

Lewicki, R. J., Polin, B., & Lount, R. B., Jr. (2016). An exploration of the structure of effective apologies.

Main, M., & Solomon, J. (1990). Procedures for identifying infants as disorganized/disoriented during the Ainsworth Strange Situation.

Rempel, J. K., Holmes, J. G., & Zanna, M. P. (1985). Trust in close relationships.

Rutgers, A. H., Bakermans-Kranenburg, M. J., van IJzendoorn, M. H., & van Berckelaer-Onnes, I. A. (2004). Autism and attachment: A meta-analytic review.

Sandstrom, G. M., & Dunn, E. W. (2014). Is efficiency overrated? Minimal social interactions lead to belonging and positive affect.

Tajfel, H., & Turner, J. C. (1979). An integrative theory of intergroup conflict.

Williams, K. D., Cheung, C. K. T., & Choi, W. (2000). Cyberostracism: Effects of being ignored over the Internet.

Chapter 5 Closeness and love

Acevedo, B. P., & Aron, A. (2009). Does a long-term relationship kill romantic love?

Algoe, S. B., Gable, S. L., & Maisel, N. C. (2010). It's the little things: Everyday gratitude as a booster shot for romantic relationships.

Aron, A., & Aron, E. N. (1986). Love and the Expansion of Self: Understanding Attraction and Satisfaction.

Aron, A., Melinat, E., Aron, E. N., Vallone, R. D., & Bator, R. J. (1997). The experimental generation of interpersonal closeness: A procedure and some preliminary findings.

Aron, A., Norman, C. C., Aron, E. N., McKenna, C., & Heyman, R. E. (2000). Couples' shared participation in novel and arousing activities and experienced relationship quality.

Baumeister, R. F., & Leary, M. R. (1995). The need to belong: Desire for interpersonal attachments as a fundamental human motivation.

Carstensen, L. L., Isaacowitz, D. M., & Charles, S. T. (1999). Taking time seriously: A theory of socioemotional selectivity.

Driver, J. L., & Gottman, J. M. (2004). Daily marital interactions and positive affect during marital conflict among newlywed couples.

Fraley, R. C., Hudson, N. W., Heffernan, M. E., & Segal, N. (2015). Are adult attachment styles categorical or dimensional? A taxometric analysis of general and relationship-specific attachment orientations.

Gable, S. L., Reis, H. T., Impett, E. A., & Asher, E. R. (2004). What do you do when things go right? The intrapersonal and interpersonal benefits of sharing positive events.

Hazan, C., & Shaver, P. (1987). Romantic love conceptualized as an attachment process.

Laurenceau, J.-P., Barrett, L. F., & Pietromonaco, P. R. (1998). Intimacy as an interpersonal process: The importance of self-disclosure, partner disclosure, and perceived partner responsiveness in interpersonal exchanges.

Reis, H. T., & Shaver, P. (1988). Intimacy as an interpersonal process.

Chapter 6 Groups, influence and culture

Asch, S. E. (1956). Studies of independence and conformity: I. A minority of one against a unanimous majority.

Baumeister, R. F., & Leary, M. R. (1995). The need to belong: Desire for interpersonal attachments as a fundamental human motivation.

Bond, R., & Smith, P. B. (1996). Culture and conformity: A meta-analysis of studies using Asch's (1952b, 1956) line judgment task.

Boothby, E. J., Cooney, G., Sandstrom, G. M., & Clark, M. S. (2018). The liking gap in conversations: Do people like us more than we think?

Brady, W. J., Wills, J. A., Jost, J. T., Tucker, J. A., & Van Bavel, J. J. (2017). Emotion shapes the diffusion of moralized content in social networks.

Burger, J. M. (2009). Replicating Milgram: Would people still obey today?

Cooper, K., Smith, L. G. E., & Russell, A. (2017). Social identity, self-esteem, and mental health in autism.

Cruwys, T., Dingle, G. A., Haslam, C., Haslam, S. A., Jetten, J., & Morton, T. A. (2013). Social group memberships protect against future depression, alleviate depression symptoms and prevent depression relapse.

Edmondson, A. (1999). Psychological safety and learning behavior in work teams.

Haslam, S. A., & Reicher, S. D. (2012). Contesting the "nature" of conformity: What Milgram and Zimbardo's studies really show.

Henrich, J., Heine, S. J., & Norenzayan, A. (2010). The weirdest people in the world?

Hofstede, G. (1980). Culture's Consequences: International Differences in Work-Related Values.

Janis, I. L. (1972). Victims of Groupthink: A Psychological Study of Foreign-Policy Decisions and Fiascoes.

Markus, H. R., & Kitayama, S. (1991). Culture and the self: Implications for cognition, emotion, and motivation.

Milgram, S. (1963). Behavioral study of obedience.

Oyserman, D., Coon, H. M., & Kemmelmeier, M. (2002). Rethinking individualism and collectivism: Evaluation of theoretical assumptions and meta-analyses.

Perry, G. (2013). Behind the Shock Machine: The Untold Story of the Notorious Milgram Psychology Experiments.

Prentice, D. A., & Miller, D. T. (1993). Pluralistic ignorance and alcohol use on campus: Some consequences of misperceiving the social norm.

Sandstrom, G. M., & Dunn, E. W. (2014). Social interactions and well-being: The surprising power of weak ties.

Tajfel, H., & Turner, J. C. (1979). An integrative theory of intergroup conflict.

Williams, K. D., Cheung, C. K. T., & Choi, W. (2000). Cyberostracism: Effects of being ignored over the Internet.

Chapter 7 Helping others well

Bloom, P. (2016). Against empathy: The case for rational compassion.

Bolger, N., Zuckerman, A., & Kessler, R. C. (2000). Invisible support and adjustment to stress.

Brown, S. L., Nesse, R. M., Vinokur, A. D., & Smith, D. M. (2003). Providing social support may be more beneficial than receiving it: Results from a prospective study of mortality.

Cutrona, C. E., & Russell, D. W. (1990). Type of social support and specific stress: Toward a theory of optimal matching.

Darley, J. M., & Latané, B. (1968). Bystander intervention in emergencies: Diffusion of responsibility.

Dazzi, T., Gribble, R., Wessely, S., & Fear, N. T. (2014). Does asking about suicide and related behaviours induce suicidal ideation? What is the evidence?

Dunn, E. W., Aknin, L. B., & Norton, M. I. (2008). Spending money on others promotes happiness.

Figley, C. R. (Ed.) (1995). Compassion fatigue: Coping with secondary traumatic stress disorder in those who treat the traumatized.

Fischer, P., Krueger, J. I., Greitemeyer, T., Vogrincic, C., Kastenmüller, A., Frey, D., Heene, M., Wicher, M., & Kainbacher, M. (2011). The bystander-effect: A meta-analytic review on bystander intervention in dangerous and non-dangerous emergencies.

Flynn, F. J., & Lake, V. K. B. (Bohns) (2008). "If you need help, just ask": Underestimating compliance with direct requests for help.

Helgeson, V. S., & Fritz, H. L. (1998). A theory of unmitigated communion.

Hobfoll, S. E. (1989). Conservation of resources: A new attempt at conceptualizing stress.

House, J. S. (1981). Work Stress and Social Support.

Maslach, C., & Jackson, S. E. (1981). The measurement of experienced burnout.

Miller, W. R., & Rollnick, S. (1991). Motivational interviewing: Preparing people to change addictive behavior.

Miserandino, C. (2003). The spoon theory.

Philpot, R., Liebst, L. S., Levine, M., Bernasco, W., & Lindegaard, M. R. (2020). Would I be helped? Cross-national CCTV footage shows that intervention is the norm in public conflicts.

Pinquart, M., & Sörensen, S. (2003). Differences between caregivers and noncaregivers in psychological health and physical health: A meta-analysis.

Raymaker, D. M., Teo, A. R., Steckler, N. A., et al. (2020). "Having all of your internal resources exhausted beyond measure and being left with no clean-up crew": Defining autistic burnout.

Ryan, R. M., & Deci, E. L. (2000). Self-determination theory and the facilitation of intrinsic motivation, social development, and well-being.

Singer, T., & Klimecki, O. M. (2014). Empathy and compassion.

World Health Organization (2019). Burn-out an "occupational phenomenon": International Classification of Diseases.

FREE ON THE WEBSITE

Your book has a home online

Everything in this book is free at spreadloveandacceptance.com, along with tools that do the sums for you, guided journeys, a raindrop professor with kind answers and a few cosy games. There is no account and no paid version.

Start here

Scan with your phone's camera to open the home page.

spreadloveandacceptance.com

Ask Professor Puddles

Tell a cheerful raindrop professor what's going on and get kind next steps and words to say. His answers are written in advance, never made up on the spot.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/ask

The Chat analyzer

Check how a text may land before you send it, read one you got, or look at a whole chat to see where it turned.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/signal-translator

Guided journeys

Three to six small steps for what's going on, from the same argument again to a new blended family.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/journeys

Every workpaper, free to print

All the forms in the series, to print or to fill in on screen and save as a PDF on your own device.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/workpapers/fill

COSY, CALM AND FREE

Tools for one person, or for two

Every free tool in one place, starting with the ones you can use on your own.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/tools

The full chapters

Each chapter in this book has a fuller version online, with more research, more examples and more to try.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/book/

Tidbit and Sugarfoot's arcade

Six calm classic games, including the Home Run Derby. Play as either pup, and there's no game over.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/frequency-journey

Kindness Coin Pusher

A cosy 3D coin pusher. Every five coins that drop bring a short, useful tip.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/coin-pusher

The Night Garden

A calm breathing game. A flower blooms with every slow breath, and there are fireflies to guide and a lily pond to fill.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/night-garden

The free app

Put it on your phone or computer in a couple of taps. Pages you have opened work offline.

spreadloveandacceptance.com/install

Everything stays on your device. No sign-up and no account. What you type in the tools, the workpapers and the games is kept in your own browser or app, and nothing is sent to us.

FREE ONLINE

The Logic Behind It: more examples, free online

The "Another way to see it" boxes in this book come from a free page on the website. It has more than seventy everyday reactions that can look odd, rude or over the top from outside, each laid out in the same six parts, with the other person's side and one small step.

You can type what happened in your own words and see the closest situations, pick another picture when the first doesn't click, and build a card of your own. It is free, with no account, and what you type stays on your device.

The pocket guide in this series, The Logic Behind It, collects 38 of them in print, one to a page.

Scan to open

Or type the address.

`spreadloveandacceptance.com/the-logic-behind-it`

The series

Spread Love & Acceptance is a series of short books. Each one stands on its own; read them in any order.

Book 1	Know Yourself Kindly Start with yourself: your history, your wiring, your feelings, your worth and how your mind works.
Book 2	Heal and Steady For the heavy days: stress, anger, worry and low mood, grief, repair, change and what matters to you.
Book 3	Understanding Each Other (this book) Pace and tone, how words land, how we see each other, belonging, love, groups and helping well.
Book 4	Share the Load For homes, families and teams: seeing the unseen work, one owner per job, and two kinds of fair.
Workbook	The Workpapers: The Bound Edition Every form is free to print or fill in at spreadloveandacceptance.com. This is the bound edition, with spare copies and the sums on paper.
Pocket guide	The Logic Behind It Thirty-eight everyday reactions, one to a page, with the logic behind each one and a kind next step.

The print books are optional; everything stays free online at spreadloveandacceptance.com/book.

Your notes

For what you want to remember, try or ask about.