A friend leaves the party without a goodbye. A colleague's feedback lands like a slap. Someone says "I'm fine" when they plainly aren't. Most reactions that look odd, rude or over the top from outside have a logic behind them, and it makes sense once you can see it. This pocket guide lays that logic out for thirty-eight everyday situations, one to a page. Each page shows what the reaction looks like from outside, the reasoning step by step, an everyday picture that works the same way, the other person's side, and one sentence and one small step that help you both. It runs both ways. Some pages explain neurodivergent logic, some explain common social habits like small talk and hints, and many cover things anyone does. Every page has a code to its free online version, and blank cards at the back help you work out your own.
